

TABLE OF CONTENTS

|  |           |
|--|-----------|
| USER AGREEMENT BEFORE ACCESS IS GRANTED                           | 1  |
| HOW TO USE THE SUPPORT CENTER TO GET QUESTIONS ANSWERED INSTANTLY | 2  |
| TABLE OF CONTENTS   | 3  |
| SECTION 1: TRUSTEE SECRETS  | 4  |
| TRUST DEFINITIONS  | 6         |
| A BRIEF HISTORY OF TRUST LAW   | 8         |
| POWER OF A TRUST   | 10        |
| THE VARIETY OF TRUSTS AVAILABLE  | 11        |
| EXPRESS TRUST JURISDICTION   | 14        |
| CARL WEISS: ON EXPRESS TRUSTS  | 16        |
| THOSE WHO MISTRUST - MISS TRUSTS   | 17        |
| TRUSTEES IN COMMERCE - A WAY OF LIFE                                     | 21        |
| SOVEREIGNTY: MISSION IMPOSSIBLE  | 22        |
| SECURED PARTIES: NOBODY'S CREDITOR                                       | 25        |
| TRUSTEE IN COMMERCE: BODY ARMOUR FOR COMMERCIAL WARFARE                  | 26        |
| CARL WEISS' CONCISE TRUSTEE HANDBOOK                              | 28 |
| TRUST BASICS   | 28        |
| EXPRESS TRUSTS UNDER THE COMMON LAW                                      | 29        |
| DECLARATION OF THE EXPRESS TRUST   | 30        |
| THE TRUST CORPUS   | 32        |
| CERTIFICATES   | 33        |
| TRUSTEE BASICS   | 35        |
| POWERS & DUTIES OF THE TRUSTEE   | 36        |
| PRIVILEGES & LIABILITIES OF THE TRUSTEE                                  | 38        |
| AUTHORIZED REPRESENTATIVES   | 40        |
| EXPRESS TRUST vs. CORPORATION  | 41        |
| UNDERSTANDING COMMERCE   | 45        |
| DOING BUSINESS   | 48        |
| LIMITING LIABILITY & RISK  | 49        |
| BANKING  | 50        |
| TRANSFERRING ASSETS  | 54        |
| ISSUING CERTIFICATES & BONDS   | 56        |
| KEEPING MINUTES  | 58        |
| PREVAILING IN LEGAL AFFAIRS  | 58        |
| MAINTAINING PROPER I.R.S. RELATIONS                                      | 64        |
| CONCLUSION   | 66        |
| BIGGEST ISSUES IN TRUST ADMINISTRATION                                   | 68        |

SECTION 1: TRUSTEE SECRETS

There is ONE GOAL to achieve from Private Wealth Academy's trust education - to operate a Bulletproof Trust as a competent trustee by mastering the following Three Pillars of Trust:

1. TRUSTEE TRAINING

- a. Trustee Training Videos & Document
- b. Carl Weiss Trustee's Handbook

2. TRUST WEB SETUP

- a. Trust Indenture
- b. Trust Web Structure

3. TRUST BANKING WITH LAWFUL MONEY

- a. Lawful Money
- b. Setup Bank Account

The student who finishes these Three Pillars of Trust, will receive a multitude of benefits:

- Eliminate attorney, accountant and executor fees. Keep the power in your hands!
- Transfer assets into a trust in a private, safe and absolutely confidential way. Assets are protected because there is no public record — the #1 enemy in the world is litigation.
- Preserve assets for future generations.
- Provide for a relative, disabled child or loved one after death.
- Own, operate and transact any business in the name of the trust without involvement in a personal capacity. Avoid personal risk and liability.
- Avoid probate, inheritance taxes, estate taxes.
- Trustee is bound by contract to protect confidentiality. Courts have no authority to force someone to abrogate the rights of contract (U.S. Constitution Article 1 Section 10 Clause 1). They can only “enforce” the contract!
- Reduce income tax liability or redeem lawful money for tax non-obligation.
- Avoid probate entirely by making the death into a simple change of leadership, rather than a change of ownership that would normally require courts to get involved. When courts get involved, heirs often develop an illness called Litigation Stress Disorder as their inheritance is reduced by up to 50% in many cases, a legal theft in broad daylight. Ownership and title can be passed to heirs in complete privacy. Heirs cannot change, challenge, or contest wishes at death.

- Do whatever an individual man or woman may do, but in the name of the trust. Providing protection from creditors, liability suits, malpractice suits, employees, personal bankruptcy, excessive divorce settlements and court actions. This is what John Rockefeller meant by his famous “own nothing, control everything” speech.

Inside the Member’s Area is a wealth of information and continuing education materials to enhance your knowledge, confidence, and abilities! We’ll dive deep into the secrets of “avoiding the income tax” legally (HINT: taxes are legal and lawful and 99.9% of Americans are currently liable for income taxes, however contrary to popular belief this tax is not based on income!). Learn why a private express trust should never be dragged into court (except by the incompetence of a trustee) AND how to defend it if someone tries! (HINT: It’s all about controlling the contract [via arbitration] and challenging jurisdiction.)

Learn how a Trust Web Structure is designed to operate a commercial empire that is judgment proof! (HINT: it takes only 3 entities, but the contracts between each of them is what perfects the protection.)

If one starts looking into the world of trusts they will quickly be overwhelmed with the amount of information available. Everyone from Harvard lawyers to the IRS has weighed in on the topic of trusts. That is... they’ve weighed in on trusts which are “within their jurisdiction.”

And while there are millions of trust variations that are “within their jurisdiction,” there is only one that is not! This trust is the only trust that has proven to be impenetrable, even when taken to court, thus protecting the assets it’s sworn to keep safe. It was Carlton Weiss’ job for 30+ years to pierce trusts, this is the only type of trust (when properly managed) he was not able to pierce.

TRUST DEFINITIONS

TRUST: Any arrangement by which title to property (real and/or personal) owned by one person (the grantor) is held by another person (the trustee) for the benefit of a third person (the beneficiary). A valid trust requires:

- (1) the purpose or intent is clearly expressed
- (2) the trust indenture clearly states the jurisdiction of the trust
- (3) funds or other property sufficiently identified in the indenture to enable title to pass to the trustee, and
- (4) actual delivery of property by the grantor to the trustee with the intent that title pass to the trustee.

Black's Law Dictionary, p. 1513 (7th ed. 1999) Trust: “[t]he right, enforceable solely in equity, to the beneficial enjoyment of property to which another person holds the legal title[.]”

TRUST ESTATE: The trust assets, property and anything of value kept within the trust's control. Alternative terms are Capital, Corpus, Estate, Principal, Res.

TRUSTEE: The person (designated by will, trust or otherwise) holding title to, and responsible for dealing with, the property of a trust. A trustee must act with honesty, good faith, and prudence in administering the trust. The trustee or trustees receive the property and hold legal title for the benefit of one or more beneficiaries (who hold equitable title). As a fiduciary, a trustee owes the beneficiaries duties of loyalty and care. The trustee may be an individual or organization. Restatement § 378.

BENEFICIARY: The beneficiary, also known as the cestui que trust, the beneficial or equitable owner of the property. The beneficiary is said to have the “use” of the property, and can appeal to the court for an accounting or replacement of the trustee to ensure proper use of the property. See Black's Law Dictionary (5th Ed. 1979), “use.”

INDENTURE: A deed to which two or more persons are parties, and in which these enter into reciprocal and corresponding grants or obligations towards each other.

GRANTOR: The person by whom a grant is made. Alternative terms are Creator, Donor, Founder, Settlor, Trustor.

SUI JURIS: Of his own right; possessing full social and civil rights; not under any legal disability, or the power of another, or guardianship.

OWN: To have a good legal title; to hold as property; to have a legal or rightful title to; to have; to possess.

CONTROL: To exercise restraining or directing influence over; regulate; restrain; dominate; curb; to hold from action; overpower; counteract; govern.

SECURED PARTY: The lender or seller who is holding the security interest or lien that is against an asset that has been pledged. Secured parties are paid first before the unsecured ones.

SECURITY AGREEMENT: A contract between a secured lender and a borrower that will specify the asset pledged as security and the conditions under which it may be foreclosed on.

CONTRACT: A binding agreement between two or more persons or parties, where sufficient consideration was given, stipulations to do or not to do a particular thing.

COLLATERAL: By the side; at the side; attached upon the side. Not lineal, but upon a parallel or diverging line. Additional or auxiliary; supplementary; cooperating

NATURAL LAW: A body of unchanging principles regarded as the basis for all conduct.

COMMON LAW: The part of English law that is derived from custom and judicial precedent rather than statutes. Often contrasted with statutory law. Common law comprises the body of those principles and rules of action, relation to the government and security of persons and property, which derive their authority solely from usage and customs of immemorial antiquity (reaching beyond the limits of memory, tradition, or recorded history). Courts and judges are given little to no room to interpret the Common law. All numbers in common law are spelled out (not 1-2-3...). [Although this exists as humanity's closest body of laws that reflect Natural Law, it's jurisdiction and use of law should be avoided where possible and Natural Law should be used.]

EQUITY LAW: Literally the embodiment of the Golden Rule "Do No Harm to Others Nor Their Property." Due to Common law being so RIGOROUS in its application, leaving little to no room for interpretation, equity may be applied in extenuating circumstances to allow for fair verdicts. Its application belongs to the realm of MORALITY rather than JURIAL.

POSITIVE LAW: Statutes which have been laid down by a legislature, court, or other human institution and can be interpreted to take whatever form the authors want.

STATUTORY LAW: Written law passed by a body of legislature. This is as opposed to oral or customary law; or regulatory law promulgated by the executive or common law of the judiciary. Statutes may originate with national, state legislatures or local municipalities.

THE CONFLICT OF LAWS: Sometimes called "private international law," it concerns relations across different legal jurisdictions between natural persons, companies, corporations and other legal entities, their legal obligations and the appropriate forum and procedure for resolving disputes between them. Where a contract makes incompatible reference to more than one legal framework, judges have accepted that the principle of party autonomy allows the parties to select the law most appropriate to their transaction.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF TRUST LAW

Although a history of trusts can be found dating back as far as 200 BC; Trust law really came into form with the Norman Conquest of England in 1066, which decreed the King owned all the land. However, he did from time to time give others control to manage the lands – this kind of ownership was known as tenure – this is where the term, “tenant” originated. A tenured resident could pass on his interest to an eldest son, but the King was entitled to an estate tax – this was the birth of our estate tax system.

In 1215 England adopted the Magna Carta, which laid the foundation for Trust Law as we know it today. Under the Magna Carta, any person holding land had the right to pass it directly to an heir. If an heir was under age at the time of death, a guardian of the land was appointed until “the heir became of age”.

The guardian was trusted with the guardianship of such land and maintenance of the houses, parks, fish reserves, and everything else pertaining to it. When the heir became of age, the land was restored back. This was the original definition of a “trustee”.

“Equity compels performance.” and “In common law, damages in tort receive restitution [when a loss is shown].”

The Magna Carta stated that the land shall be entrusted to prudent men who shall be answerable to the King for revenues and other guardianship issues of such land. And in trust law today, trustees are still held to the “Prudent Person Rules” in managing estates for others. This is because the maxim of law states “equity compels performance”.

The law of trusts was constructed as part of “equity,” a body of principles made by the Courts of Chancery, which sought to correct the strictness of the common law. Trusts were an addition to property law, as the courts decided it was fair that a trustee be compelled to use it for the benefit of another. This recognized a split between legal and beneficial ownership: the legal owner was referred to as a “trustee” (because he was “entrusted” with property) and the beneficial owner was the “beneficiary”.

In fact, most of America’s trust law came over from England in the 1500’s during Great Britain’s world expeditions to establish Royal Chartered Colonies. Eventually the colonists wanted full independence from Britain and even drew up their own original trust (the Declaration of Independence) in 1776 and the Articles of Confederation in 1777 - the original trust indenture, (the people of the states being the grantor, trustees being the state representatives (which is now Congress), and the beneficiaries being the states and people of those states.)

Read the Articles of Confederation and one will see a NAME, SITUS, PARTIES and GOVERNING LAWS are all that is necessary to create a trust. And The U.S. Constitution is an amendment to that original trust indenture – the starting words of the Constitution showing that to be the case, “We the People, in order to create a MORE perfect Union...” which is a fancy way of amending or ratifying a previous trust indenture.

See, it was the Royal Chartered Colonies or English joint-stock companies that owned the original Thirteen Colonies. This was one of the true reasons for the American Revolutionary War; the Kingdom of Great Britain had full legal title to the Thirteen Colonies in America, but the patriots were willing to physically fight for their freedom to get out from Britain's rule, resulting in the establishment of the United States of America. The United States Constitution was then established in 1787 and THE UNITED STATES corporation later founded in 1871.

“When a man assumes a public trust, he should consider himself a public property.”

- Thomas Jefferson

Trust law has come a long way in the last thousand years. While trusts have been traditionally used to pass property from one heir to another, today there are many purposes for establishing trusts.

Matt Tobin and Tom Cota of South Dakota Trust Company put it simply:

“A trust provides a framework in which money is managed in a predictable fashion, by people you choose, according to standards you set. A trust creates guidelines for current and future distributions that reflect your wishes, and may also offer substantial tax benefits and provide an expedient method for the transfer of assets.”

We have taken the most flexible, protective, and secure elements from long-standing and notable Express Trusts, such as the North American Land Company (1764), the Merchants Bank of New York (1810), the Massachusetts Land Trusts and Massachusetts Electric Companies (1912), the Rockefeller-model (1929) and pertinent parts of the Kennedy-model (2000), all refined and revised to withstand the challenges of the world today. Our trusts are designed to survive even a merger between the United States, Canada and Mexico, and any changes in fiat currency that come with it.

“The secret to success is to own nothing, but control everything.” John D. Rockefeller

POWER OF A TRUST

1. We The People (True Sovereigns - Power from Natural Law)
2. State Citizen (Sovereignty of The People by Pledge)
3. State [Republic] (Granted Certain Power by Citizens)
4. United States (Granted Power by States)
5. Citizen of United States aka 14th Amendment Citizen (Granted Power by United States)
U.S. Citizens do not have rights. Instead, these have been taken away and replaced with liberty (a nautical term). Liberty is temporary freedom with restrictions. As a 14th Amendment U.S. citizen, you're only "free" until someone says it is time to go back to "port/jail".

Where Does A Private Express Trust Fit? **All Cited Cases are U.S. or State Supreme Court*

- Stands as a State Citizen with all powers bestowed on that title - *Brigham vs. U.S. (1941)
- Lawfully may do what any other human may - Harwood v. Tracy (1893)
- Sui juris aka acting independent from all others - Hardwicke v. Wurmser (1915)
- Can sue & be sued (in the name of the trust) - Waterman v. MacKenzie (1891)
- In order to maintain its private jurisdiction - an express trust cannot receive benefits/privileges/franchises from any outside party or government - Hale v Henkel (1905)

A final note should be made that private express trusts are able to be created in every country, even if your country/state does not provide permission for the creation of statutory trusts. Further, ideas regarding lawful money are contained in every country's code [for lawful redemption of fiat currency], but individual research will need to be done to find the code applicable for your country. When said code is found for your country, please reach out to support so we can update our Lawful Money list and share with the community.

THE VARIETY OF TRUSTS AVAILABLE

There are a lot of trust variations, each often created for a specific legal purpose. Virtually all of the trust variations listed below are statutory in nature, but can be made private in special cases.

STATUTORY TRUST: Trust created by operation of law [liable to statutes and victimless crimes].

According to UTC § 401 Methods Of Creating Trust, a statutory trust may be created by:

1. Transfer of property to another person; or
2. Declaration by the owner of property that the owner holds identifiable property as trustee (grantor trust); or
3. Exercise of a power of appointment in favor of a trustee.

But only if:

- 1) The grantor has capacity to create a trust;
- 2) The grantor indicates the intention to create a trust;
- 3) The trust has a definite beneficiary; or
  - a) Is a charitable trust;
  - b) A trust for the care of an animal,
  - c) A trust for a non-charitable purpose;
- 4) The trustee has duties to perform; and
- 5) The same person is not the sole trustee and sole beneficiary. (must pass The Control Test)

THE CONTROL TEST: A beneficiary is definite if the beneficiary can be ascertained now or in the future, subject to any applicable rule against perpetuities. A power in a trustee to select a beneficiary from an indefinite class is valid. If the power is not exercised within a reasonable time, the power fails and the property subject to, the power passes to the persons who would have taken the property had the power not been conferred. [To pass the test, the Grantor and Trustee must be an 'arms-length' third party, not an 'alter ego' or relative.]

PRIVATE TRUST: Trust created by natural right [not liable to statutes, only for torts].

ESTATE: [Similar to a Testamentary Trust, it is] used to complete the affairs of the deceased and to distribute property to the beneficiaries in an efficient and accurate fashion. Comes into existence at decedent's death.

TESTAMENTARY TRUST: Trust created with a will that will take effect only after the writer's death and will be subject to probate.

CHARITABLE TRUST: A trust used for a charitable purpose, such as the advancement of health, education or religion.

SIMPLE TRUST: [In tax terms,] the trust must distribute all income to the income beneficiary and cannot retain any income.

COMPLEX TRUST: [In tax terms,] the trust can accumulate income instead of a mandatory distribution of the income to the beneficiary.

PURE TRUST: A trust situation that involves three parties. The parties are the creator of the trust, the trustee, and the beneficiary. This is a contractual trust and is different to a statutory trust and is a legal document.

GRANTOR TRUST: Trust established by an agreement that is not a will. Trustor keeps control of property entrusted, realizing taxes on income from the property. [This is the trust the IRS most often takes to court over tax liabilities, only because it does not pass The Control Test. In fact, any trust that does not pass The Control Test, will be deemed a Grantor Trust.]

REVOCABLE TRUST: Also known as a Living Trust, this trust may be revoked at any time before vesting [and offers little protection legally].

IRREVOCABLE TRUST: A trust that cannot be revoked or recalled. [It may be amended by the Board of Trustees and its Minutes, but all must remain in accord with the ‘spirit of the contract’.]

RESULTING TRUST: An implied trust arising from the conduct of the parties, where one party holds legal title to another's property, but only for the other's benefit.

EXPRESS TRUST: A trust made by its maker rather than by law. [Not liable to statutes, unless it quotes or finds foundation in such laws; only liable to torts.]

THE CONTRACT CLAUSE: Appears in the United States Constitution, Article I, section 10, clause 1: “No State shall enter into any Treaty, Alliance, or Confederation; grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal; coin Money; emit Bills of Credit; make any Thing but gold and silver Coin a Tender in Payment of Debts; pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts, or grant any Title of Nobility.”

The trust we’ll be discussing from hereon is the Irrevocable Express Trust, a private, lawful, legal, valid business organization that stands on its own. It has the right to own property, engage in business transactions, reduce and incur liabilities (including tax liabilities depending on the activity which renders it liable to pay the tax). The express trust is a private contract doing business under the general common law of contracts. So as long as no benefit, privilege or franchise from any government or outside party is received, the trust owes no duty to any government or outside party to the extent that no common-law criminal or civil wrong has been committed.

With Express Trusts - the Contract Makes the Law - The terms and provisions of the trust will establish the entire contractual arrangement, including the identities, positions of the parties, trust's name, jurisdiction and situs and all particulars of administration all of which the courts of equity will fully support by the principle that equity compels performance. Clews v. Jamieson, 182 U.S. 461, 21 S.Ct., 45 L. Ed 1183 (1901)

Once you declare the Express Trust, it is a bona fide legal entity having a separate & distinct juridical personality. Brightham vs. U.S., 38 F. Supp. 625 (D.C. Mass. 1941) appeal dismissed 122 F.2d 792 (reported in Title 26 I.R.C. 31, p.356) | Waterman v. Mackenzie, 138 U.S. 252 (1891) | Burnett v. Smith, S.W. 1007 (1922) | Muir v. C.I.R., 182F F.2d 819 (C.A.4 1950)

In Berry v. McCourt, 204 N.E.2d 235, 240 (1965) the court held that the Express Trust is a “contractual relationship based on trust form”; and in Smith v. Morse, 2 Cal. 524, it was held that any law or procedure in its operation denying or obstructing contract rights impairs the contractual obligation and is, therefore, violative of Article I, Section 10 of the Constitution. Because the Express Trust is created by the exercise of the natural right to contract, which cannot be abridged, the agreement, when executed, becomes protected under federally enforceable right of contract law and not under laws passed by any of the several state legislatures.

While the express trust can exercise rights similar to corporations, the express trust (when properly executed) is in no way meant to be confused with being a corporate entity which operates under legislative/statutory law. Corporations are fictional entities that come with benefits, privileges and statutory jurisdiction while express trusts are afforded all the common-law protections ordinarily given to private contracts and may do anything that any person sui juris may do. Alfred Chandler summed it up perfectly...

"Express Trust puts the legal estate entirely in one or more (persons), while others have a beneficial interest in and out of the same, but are neither partners nor agents. This simple, adequate, common-law right, any person or group of persons sui juris may exercise. The Trustees issuing certificates of beneficial (and capital) interest divided into shares, as well as issuing bonds and other obligations, as freely as they open a bank account, have a pass book, and draw and circulate checks, or make whatever contractual relations are allowed to persons as a natural right." - Alfred D. Chandler

EXPRESS TRUST JURISDICTION

Express Trusts fall under the realm of equity & common law of contracts. (It should be noted that) the Express Trust is created under common law, it is NOT a creature of the common law as distinguished from equity, but rather it is created under common law of contracts and not dependent upon any statutes. Equity supplements the common law.)

In today's economic situation, the term "citizen" is presumed to signify the 14th Amendment citizen (a citizen with no natural rights, only privileges and licenses). However, this definition cannot be applied to the Express Trust which is specifically created under the original common law. The trust is a natural person because of how and by whom it was created. Corporations are artificial persons "citizens of the United States" within the meaning of the 14th Amendment. Santa Clara County v. Southern Pacific R. Co., 118 U.S. 394, 396 (1886)

Eliot v. Freeman, 220 U.S. 178 (1911) the court made it clear that the Express Trust is NOT subject to legislative control. It went on to acknowledge that the right-wise stance of the United State Supreme Court that the trust relationship comes under the realm of equity, based upon the common law right of contract, and it is NOT subject to legislative restrictions as are corporations and other organizations created by legislative authority. They are created under the common law of contracts and do not depend upon any statute.

HOW A BULLETPROOF TRUST CAN BE BROKEN

1. You commit a common-law crime (Murder, Robbery, Manslaughter, Rape, Sodomy, Larceny, Arson, Mayhem, and Burglary, Assault, Battery, False Imprisonment, Perjury, and Intimidation of Jurors) aka The Golden Rule: Do No Harm To Person And Property
2. You commingle personal funds and trust funds (causes in persona conjuncta legally)
3. IF you are tax-obligated and refuse to pay [a.k.a. when lawful money is not redeemed]

SHORTHAND: HOW TO OPERATE AS A TRUSTEE:

1. All written materials (business cards, checks, bills, letterheads) must contain one of the following "identifiers" beside the Trust's name:
  - a. An Irrevocable Express Trust Organization
  - b. An Express Trust
  - c. A Trust Organization
  - d. Organized Under Declaration of Trust
  - e. ETO [meaning Express Trust Organization]
2. All signatures by a Trustee must contain one of the following:
  - a. by: [YOUR NAME], the property and funds of the trust organization are only liable for contract obligations, individual Trustee(s) or interest-holders are not personally liable.
  - b. by: [YOUR NAME], as Trustee and not personally"
  - c. by: [YOUR NAME], Without Recourse to Trustee
3. All contracts and disclaimers must contain the following clauses:

- a. “This contractual agreement shall be governed, construed, and interpreted in accordance with Natural Law. Where necessary, a court of common law is demanded as the choice of law. Provider’s principal situs shall serve as the location for private arbitration. Each party selects a neutral arbitrator, and the two will select a third party to settle a dispute as a party. All judgments will be final and binding on all parties. Claimant shall render payment for arbitrators, the fee to be recompensed by Respondent upon successful claim.”
- b. “Trust is liable for its obligations. Trustee and interest-holders not held liable personally per Article 6 § 12” [Citing provision of the trust limiting liability for trustees and interest-holders.]

Where possible, avoid mixing personal and trust addresses, phone numbers, and other data. If trust and personal affairs are mixed too heavily to the point a court cannot tell “who is who,” the trust will be ruled in persona conjuncta, meaning it is an alter-ego trust that will not pass the control test and offers no protection to its users.

CARL WEISS: ON EXPRESS TRUSTS

Carlton Albert Weiss was a private investigator during the 1970s and 1980s when economic conditions in the US were much like they are today. He based his business around piercing corporate veils and other asset protection strategies. During his years in the business he noticed a common tie between all asset protection strategies prepared by attorneys.

That tie is legislative statutes rather than common-law rights which everybody naturally possesses. He noticed that the mere statutory nature of the protection made it loose and easily penetrated. Mr. Weiss was required to take his knowledge a step further by making it his specialty and formal law study. Before signing on with NACRS he would go on to become a private advisor to some of the most successful collections firms and attorneys in the West, teaching them how to pierce pure trusts and other faulty non-statutory entities.

He was a collector of rare and antiquarian law books, particularly in the area of trust & admiralty law, a hobby he took up during the archive research he did as a private investigator on Express Trusts under the Common Law, which was finally synthesized into what is seen before you today. Albeit, the Trust Indenture's foundation is founded in Natural Law over Common Law. Carl found these trusts in particular are the only ones safe from courts and government, and his systematic approach is proof positive of that fact.

THOSE WHO MISTRUST - MISS TRUSTS

Just clarify at the outset that those who mistrust — miss trusts. Those who mistrust are those who make a serious mistake. What I will be discussing is the mistake of missing the point about Express Trusts and the advantages of using Express Trusts wisely. To illustrate, I tell about a peculiar case I worked on in 2002 with an attorney who contacted me on a recommendation from the attorney who I actually assisted in some litigation against one of that attorney's former clients.

The case was interesting because it was one of those situations I had come to appreciate: someone puts all the protections in place before the problems start, instead of scrambling to try to fix a problem at a time when they should've had the protections in place already.

The new gentleman was a divorce attorney. He had a good friend-client who had recently gone through a really ugly divorce. The client was about to tie the knot again but wanted to avoid being legally robbed by his soon-to-be wife just in case the marriage didn't work. The client was learning about invisible contracts with the divorce attorney, who was all over any credible information he could get his hands on. So, when I finally agreed to assist him he was like a kid in a toy store.

The objectives the attorney presented to me were pretty cut-and-dry—

- 1. The client wanted to be able to walk away from any divorce case without losing a single dime in a divorce settlement, but without having to spoil the romance with a prenuptial agreement;
- 2. He wanted to be able to prevent being thrown out onto the street if his wife decided to invoke the State as a surrogate husband, like what his ex-wife had done to nearly cost him his business; and
- 3. He wanted to be in his child's life regardless of what his wife did in the event they had children at a later point in the marriage.

Basically, what he wanted was to render the State powerless as a third-party overseer in his marriage contract. I gave the attorney several options, some of which were too intense for the client, such as expatriating from the United States 14th Amendment jurisdiction and repatriating to the original American Republic as provided for in applicable positive law within the United States Code See 8 U.S. Code § 1481 (2000); see also Vance v. Terrazas, 444 U.S. 252, 260 (1980) (quoting Afroyim, 387 U.S. at 262). The client didn't want to do this because he felt he didn't know enough to understand all that would be involved.

So, I gave another option. The attorney I had originally worked with agreed to ditch his BAR membership for one quick moment in order to settle several Express Trusts under the Common law in his private capacity as a man. He would appoint the divorce attorney's client as sole trustee. The client would then appoint the divorce attorney as attorney in fact to transfer the client's homes, cars, investments, loose assets and business into the trusts, separating everything according to value and risk.

Everybody was ecstatic, especially the divorce attorney because he got to take full credit since I wasn't advising him so as to avoid practicing law without a license and there was a non-disclosure agreement between us that prevented either of us from naming names. The client did it and the plan came into fruition. He got married a little while later and everything was peaceful.

In mid-2004 I got an email from the divorce attorney. Apparently, the client was now getting a divorce and the whole separation was even more bitter than what was described to me about his first divorce. The difference was there were no assets at risk. When I spoke to the attorney his mood was easy like Sunday morning. He had studied the materials I gave him, the case law I had forwarded to him and he was more or less congratulating himself with me on the phone.

He said that the wife had gone to court and gotten a run-of-the-mill temporary restraining order against the client, but when the police showed up to boot him out of the house, he had his trustee authorization documents, a certified copy of a recorded quit claim deed to the house, bills of sale for the cars, and an original certificate of trust all showing the house was trust-owned and he was the sole trustee. He explained to the police officers that she was his wife but their stay at the house was not residential in nature. She was there only when he needed to use the house to administer trust affairs.

It made me proud as he was telling me this because it showed me that there are attorneys out there capable of following the bouncing ball and understanding the common law venue in such a way as to advise a client the same way I would have. Apparently, he told his wife on many occasions that the trusts owned everything, and he just controlled it. She didn't respect him so she dismissed it along with pretty much everything else he said.

The police were powerless to act on the restraining order except to escort her off the premises at the request of the trustee. The client requested she be removed on the grounds that, as trustee, he had a duty to protect the property, and she was trying to get the State to impair his obligation to protect that property by using the police to enforce a restraining order at his (not her) place of obligation, so to speak. In other words, it was clearly an abuse of legal process. They agreed. She was furious and was determined to win the next round.

Round 2 came about when she had her attorney file for divorce. Her attorney contacted the divorce attorney who was still an attorney in fact, and he then contacted me and asked me to sit in silently on the conversation. I didn't even have to explain to him that it might be best to limit the scope of the conversation so as not to act beyond the limited power of attorney. (In other words, he was only appointed attorney in fact, not attorney of record for the divorce case. He understood that the divorce suit did not affect the trusts, and the assets owned by it, so there was no need for him to step in to that extent at this point.

Now, for all related intents and purposes, the client was broke. Even his trustee compensation wasn't attachable because it was not subject to employment statutes. Not to mention, even if it was the product of an employment contract, the compensation was still owing and the trust couldn't be compelled to pay it so as to assist the wife in collecting any divorce settlement. His trustee compensation was a separate contract whose obligation is protected under Article 1, Section 10 of the Constitution for the United States of America.

The conversation was one of the shortest negotiations I ever witnessed. There was literally nothing to discuss. The client didn't own anything and he had told his wife regularly, which she admitted, so much so that his confidence about the protection became a source of her contempt for him. He had access to things, but it was only by virtue of his duties as trustee and that was the underlying fact of the whole divorce case. She lost round 2 as well.

The third round came when it was time for him to be served with the papers. The divorce attorney was still not yet hired as the trustee's personal attorney of record. Her divorce attorney pulled out all the tricks to locate the client and have him served. However, the client had no residence. He didn't own a home. No vehicles were registered in his name. He didn't operate a business in the State. He was still a 14th Amendment citizen— but a ghost indeed.

The service attempts dragged on past the statute of limitations for service of process and her attorney ended up having to re-file the complaint after 120 days. During that time, the client was doing a bit of ducking and dodging to avoid being served, but it was more or less a game to him at this point. He had nothing to lose but nothing to gain by waiving service of process. He had won round 3 already, and was now just toying with her to prove a point.

Eventually he did get served and he hired his good old divorce attorney to handle the case. The case was rather open and shut, not just because of the trusts but because her attorney apparently had absolutely no idea what the heck he was dealing with— I halfway wondered if the client's divorce attorney sympathized with her attorney. Ultimately, she was granted the divorce, but he was not ordered to pay alimony. The court was convinced that she was given due notice that he had no money or assets well in advance of any irreconcilable differences arising between the spouses.

What's more, the Express Trusts were never even brought up beyond the evidence of ownership of the homes, cars, investments, loose assets and business, and this was evidence presented by the client's divorce attorney in his own defense since the trusts were not parties to the case. Even his trustee compensation was not attachable or garnishable because there was no legal or lawful basis upon which to exercise jurisdiction over the trusts' contract with him since he was legally unemployed. She may have won by decision, but he won by knockout.

The lesson to be learned is that the trusts offer protection that is much more real than most give them credit for. People miss the point about trusts by mistaking the weak implementation of Express Trusts under the Common Law for something inherently wrong with the trusts themselves. They fall for the idea that non-statutory trusts are worthless in legal battles.

Instead of trusting the power demonstrated in contracts, they trust the mis- and disinformation out there that says courts can do whatever they want to non-statutory trusts because they are non-statutory trusts. They never take into consideration that without a specific minimum contact to base jurisdiction on courts have no power available to do whatever they want.

For example, though an Express Trust under the Common Law may own property in a statutory jurisdiction, there is still much that needs to be overcome contractually to get a court case on. The trust is still superior because it isn't stuck in the statutory jurisdiction like a corporation, LLC or statutory trust; one simple transfer of ownership or removal from an incorporated township and its right back in the Republic. And even though a court case is filed, it doesn't mean you're automatically defeated. Serving a trustee can easily become more expensive than the actual value of the case itself.

And even then, what does one gain in the end when the trustee has nothing to give? It just goes to show that equitable title is mostly disadvantageous because ownership is not as powerful as control.

TRUSTEES IN COMMERCE - A WAY OF LIFE

There are very specific advantages of living life as a trustee in everything one does, as opposed to as a sovereign or secured party. That included a comparison to show how each choice would hold up in commerce. What I came to realize is that there is only one way of life, in its own category, that enhances all others. All the others are actually disadvantaged in commerce.

At that time, I had just developed a surefire way of piercing pure trusts, and I was on my way to finally uncovering the pivotal flaw in federal contract trusts. What my clients were asking from me at the time was a technology that would allow a statutory entity like an LLC to sniff out minimum contacts people had that bound them to legislative jurisdiction, which would obviously allow the client to overcome the burden of establishing jurisdiction in their lawsuits against those people. I had no guilt about this because my philosophy is that ignorance is never an excuse. Equity compels performance regardless.

I only assisted with cases that involved people claiming to be sovereigns, secured parties, general managers, managing directors and other players in entities like pure trusts, federal contract trusts and corporations sole. In each instance, there was always a common theme: contradiction. Every single one of the people I cracked had contradicted themselves by their stated position compared to their actual position; every single one of the non-statutory entities I helped pierce was a contradiction by its intended nature and its actual nature.

Sovereigns were nothing more than cestui qui trusts (beneficiaries). Secured parties were nothing more than people with split personalities reflected in a commercial recording—even though I understand where they went wrong, the way they went about it was so rife with contradictions—one got the sense they had a screw loose. They couldn't really be helped because they wanted to be respected as creditors when it suited their needs, yet they wanted to be absolved of liability like wards of the court when the pressure was too much.

Likewise, pure trusts were really nothing more than unincorporated associations calling themselves trusts, and most federal contract trusts were nothing more than partnerships wishing they had the protection of the Federal courts under Article 1, Section 10 of the Federal Constitution. They were contracts indeed, but they contradicted the original intent of the constitutional clause they sought protection under because the participants were exercising a franchise either during the formation or life of the trust.

These strategies I was seeing, and continue to see, place all the eggs in one basket. The really sad thing is the basket was made to hold bread, so the eggs never make it to market whole.

SOVEREIGNTY: MISSION IMPOSSIBLE

The “sovereigns” I studied with during my research initially had a good point, and the good case law to back up the point. However, as I sic'd my investigative dogs on the case, I peeled back one layer after another of confusion. I saw the truth about the strict confines of any sovereign's role in the nation or kingdom of which he is the head.

I was somewhat transplanted into the mind of the judges who had decided the cases most “sovereigns” rely on today. It became apparent that the case law actually shot sovereigns in the foot by holding over their head an internationally recognized standard they couldn't practically live up to with their limited financial and natural resources in today's commercial arena.

In the end, I didn't even need to cite legal authorities to prove this to them, though articles like George Mercier's Invisible Contracts, Richard Lancial's Benefits Accepted Equals Jurisdiction, James Montgomery's The United States is Still a British Colony, the Informer's Fallacy & Myth of the People Being the Sovereign, and timeless classics like William Whiting's War Powers certainly hit home.

The problem most of them face is they invested a lot of time and funds into something that turns out to be false. They thought they held sovereignty but they could now see they voluntarily contracted themselves under suzerainty at best.

To be truly sovereign in olden times one needed nothing less than—

- 1 A plot of land that one has absolute dominion over;
- 2 A fortified castle strategically placed on the land so as to protect self, the sovereign;
- 3 A military to protect the castle and land;
- 4 Workers to do maintenance on the castle and land;
- 5 A stockpile of weapons high powered enough to wipe out any threat inside or outside the castle and plot of land;
- 6 A stockpile of gold and silver or material or natural resources to pay the militia, workers and sustain the economy that develops out of daily needs people have when living in self-sustaining communities. This includes a stockpile of financial or natural resources to build up reserves for tough times; and to top it all off
- 7 A full sense of how to negotiate with other people who are in the same position as a sovereign, especially those who have bigger weapons and might want to take the castle by force or fraud to consolidate their own empire.
  - a. Today, not much has changed except for what electronic technology has made possible.

To be truly sovereign nowadays one need nothing less than—

- 8 A plot of land that one has absolute title to, even stronger than the protections granted under the castle doctrine in Texas. It has to be a title so strong that it is recognized all over the world, not just in one state or country, because real sovereignty is an international quality;
- 9 A fortified compound;
- 10 A militia to protect the compound and land. It has to be more than just guard dogs. It must be an actual military presence that sends a clear message to all within earshot of the land not to invade, much less trespass;
- 11 Workers to maintain the compound and land;
- 12 A stockpile of weapons or technology powerful enough to stop a modern military offensive;
- 13 A stockpile of coined gold and silver to keep from having to use Federal Reserve Notes or the Amero. One need sufficient natural resource to live on and pay people with so as to not have to engage in commerce as a sovereign, otherwise you reduce to the status of a merchant and sovereignty is lost; and to top it all off 14 A full understanding of trust law as it pertains to sovereigns as trustees and merchants as beneficiaries, contract law, national security law and negotiable instruments law, as well as the laws of power relating to sovereigns and other heads of state so that one can negotiate with the United States and State governments in a way that doesn't leave one dead, conquered or in prison because those sovereigns had more powerful weapons. Otherwise, one can end up like the Native American nations, many of which gave up their sovereignty to engage in commerce via gambling halls and casinos.

The problems one immediately face are all issues of practicality, such as—

1. While one can remove land from the incorporated city or county, the title is not absolute. One cannot effectively exercise absolute title to land as an individual, at least not land that isn't in the middle of nowhere. This kind of isolation leaves one at risk of invasion and limits flexibility in the information age. In isolation one has no "eyes & ears" out in the rest of the world to stay ahead of other sovereigns looking to expand or consolidate their empire. "Eyes & ears" are what give one intelligence to avoid being checkmated;
2. A compound is very expensive to build and difficult to maintain. Independent power, utilities and services need to be installed off-the-grid. For internet access one would need to build their own satellite, maintain their own servers, etc. Regardless, however, if the fort goes so do you because the eggs are all in one basket;
3. Having a private military is a direct threat to the United States and State governments who are far too corrupted to appreciate the absolute right of self-defense, much less the right to bear arms on an individual or nationalistic level;
4. A stockpile of weapons will attract some unwanted attention. It will deter other sovereign men, but sovereigns like the United States who stockpile tanks and missiles might not deter so easily. Though stockpiling can be done with prudence, especially with some ingenuity, the more firearms one has, the more suspicious other sovereigns will be of the motives behind stockpiling. An arms-race then ensues and one faces the likelihood of invasion or preemptive strike;
5. Using gold and silver as money with third-parties is very difficult at this point because most third-parties are still under the misconception that Federal Reserve Notes are worth something. One would have to wait until the US economy collapsed, at which time one could use commerce to conquer by buying up property for a fraction of the cost in gold. Even so, when doing so one is technically acting as a merchant, and is no longer sovereign. Even if the gold is pre-1933 lightly circulated coin, or the silver is pre-1965 ninety-percent ("junk") monetary silver, the sovereign is whoever minted the coin, which would be the United States of America in this case; and

If one truly understands trust law as it pertains to sovereigns and merchants, contract law, national security law and negotiable instruments law, as well as the laws of power relating to sovereigns and other heads of state, one will quickly realize that the people's sovereignty never truly existed.

What's more, times have changed even more since the idea was first entertained. Our times now make sovereignty a disadvantage in commerce because the moment any sovereign sets foot into the rest of the world to get things done, unless one does business by the barrel of a gun or barter using no currency or coin at all, automatically giving up whatever sovereignty is held by acting as a merchant. This includes use of a license, Social Security Number, registration of an automobile or weapon, etc. Sovereignty now only exists in only one way for this world, which is that of mind and thought. To be a king or queen, a just conscience, quick wit, intelligent mind must be delivered and acted upon and only then will the world around become one's kingdom.

SECURED PARTIES: NOBODY'S CREDITOR

A UCC Financing Statement (UCC-1) is a very mighty financial instrument indeed, but only when used for the right situation. Filing a lien on a trust one did not create and did not act as trustee for is inherently fraudulent – that is demanding a debt from an entity that owes you nothing. If the US government decided to issue you a Social Security account number and thereby create a revocable living trust naming you the beneficiary, you have no grounds to file a lien on that trust. No commercial gain was had at your expense, even if the trust is identified based on the name of the cestui que trust, such as using your name in all capital letters (e.g., JOHN WAYNE DOE).

I can create a thousand trusts, naming all of them based on the cestui que trust, and the beneficiaries don't even have to be told they are beneficiaries for the trusts to be legally and lawfully enforceable. It happens all the time. People discover they inherited an estate from a distant relative and as long as they accept the benefit when it comes time to distribute the trust, the trust does what it was created to do. Beneficiaries are merely there to benefit, not to decide. Beneficiaries don't need to be trusted by anyone to do anything because regardless of what they do, by virtue of the graciousness of the settlor or grantor, they stand only to benefit from the decisions of the people put in control of the trust— the trustees.

Therefore, one who is a beneficiary, one who benefits from a trust created by the US government has no recourse to file a lien when he discovers he's been made the beneficiary of a trust identified based on his name. There is not even a copyright violation because, generally, names alone are not intellectual property; the substance represented by the name is the intellectual property. A registered mark cannot be infringed upon in name alone, but the substance connected to the mark must also somehow be subjected to the infringement. I can call anything-ANYTHING as long as the substance is original, which is why we have different books by the same title.

To approach the commercial aspects of the creditor-debtor relationship, for instance with a 1099 Original Issue Discount (1099-OID), without understanding the pivotal role trust law plays in all this is useless. There is no room for a UCC-1 or even a 1099-OID. The simplest way to say it is that these are inadequate to fix the problem. A resignation, discharge of duty, disclaimer or rejection of beneficial interest are the only tools one needs to remedy any issue relating to holding an unwanted position in a trust. If one doesn't want the duty then resign. If one doesn't want the benefit then reject it.

TRUSTEE IN COMMERCE: BODY ARMOUR FOR COMMERCIAL WARFARE

Now, take all that and place a simple barrier between the “sovereign” or “secured party” and commerce. The barrier is called an Express Trust under the Common Law. Throw out the fragile sovereign crown and give the man bulletproof trustee armour. Now, instead of him owning a plot of land with a castle, having a royal army and a royal staff of workers, stockpiling his own weapons, having Federal Reserve Notes or minted coins in his personal possession, and understanding all applicable bodies of law to protect himself—he now does these things on behalf of a trust. Problem solved.

He needs to eat, but does he buy directly from the store with his own Federal Reserve Notes or silver dimes?

No. He buys on behalf of the trust and works out a private contract with the trust that enables him to eat the trust's food and offset his trustee compensation the trust owes him for carrying out his daily duties.

He sees an advantage to owning a ranch in a certain jurisdiction, but does he make an offer to purchase in his own name and thereby acquire personal ownership of the property?

No. He draws up an Offer to Purchase (or Offer to Buy if the trust has the gold on hand). The trust acquires the property and the beneficiaries of that trust benefit from his wise decision. He can then contract privately with the trust as to how he may use the property, offsetting his compensation if that use involves anything outside of his duties as trustee. Even so, there are ways to keep things strictly within trusteeship if one is really serious about living a trustee's life.

Let's say he needs to travel to the state to do the deal. Does he get behind the wheel of his motor vehicle with license in hand as though he's about to transport goods or passengers like any "driver" would?

No. He's a trustee, so he gets into a trust-owned automobile with a certified copy of the manufacturer's certificate of origin and bill of sale and his trustee identification, and he travels to that state on official trust business.

Whatever contract he works out with the trust regarding offsetting things along the way with his trustee compensation is a private contract that actually is protected under Article 1, Section 10. There are no questions as to the validity of such a blatant trust relationship. Who's asking? Another trust? The Constitution for the United States of America creates an Express Trust under the Common Law, as did the Articles of Confederation, to act as a limited governing entity.

Article 4, Section 2 provides a clear protection to the trustees of such trusts to do business on behalf of the trust while not being subjected to foreign business entity laws. The protection is real. If the host state tried to stop you, the trust could actually sue and the state would likely settle out of court. The state constitutions do the same for each individual territory. Therefore, the United States corporation (and all its DBAs) and State corporations are, in essence, nominee trusts created under international law by the original Express Trusts that were created back at the moment each constitution was ratified. Anytime one of these entities has questions for an Express Trust under the Common Law, they are asking an equal to show deference not legally required.

Article 1, Section 10 and Article 4, Section 2 can therefore be invoked anytime one of these entities looks as though it might impair the obligations one has to the trust or block the ability to administer trust affairs in a certain state as trustee. There is no need to run or hide like one would with a pure trust or federal contract trust. There is no fear of even being prosecuted: how many constitutional courts does one see these days? It takes someone like you to invoke constitutional jurisdiction. That's power.

The extent of the protection may not have dawned on you yet, so allow me to point out that your obligations to the trust are as extensive as everything you do in your daily life. A trustee in commerce eats, drinks and sleeps wearing his trustee amour. His clothes, his toothbrush and even his trousers are trust property. When he has Federal Reserve Notes or Amero, they are in the trust's possession by virtue of his trusteeship— never in his personal possession.

It's a lot simpler than some would expect. A simple document binder to hold the trustee identification, authorization papers, the trust's debit cards and Federal Reserve Notes is all that is ever in your possession. Possession is nine-tenths of the law, but at the same time it is only nine-tenths. There is one-tenth remaining for situations such as this. The document binder has the trust's name and a private property notice embroidered on the outside to designate ownership. The notice also names the trustee authorized to have the document binder in his possession.

At that point, everything within the document binder belongs to the trust. It may be in your possession as trustee, however the contents are in the trust's possession to the extent of nine-tenths of the law. They are in your personal possession only one-tenth by virtue of physically being on you. You are absolved of any liability associated with having the debit card or, even worse, Federal Reserve Notes. So, for all intents and purposes you have not reduced yourself to a merchant.

I can go on and on like this, but I am merely trying to illustrate a point. What good is it to be the sovereign or a secured party creditor when your status is practically useless in everyday commerce? Not to mention, how well does one sleep knowing that the game isn't over until the king is checkmated? How many "sovereigns" are backed into a corner by the Federal or State governments every year? On the other hand, the trustee sleeps well every night because he literally can't give up what he doesn't have (and doesn't need to have). He owns nothing. Yet, he controls it all.

As long as one maintains a strict separation in this manner, paying close attention to the nuances in possession, they will avoid commingling of trust property and will never diminish the protection. The commercial environment you are confronted with is as hostile toward sovereigns today as the American Republic always was toward poor whites and free negroes. They were without legally enforceable rights. They had no protections. What they couldn't do for themselves would not get done, and there was no universal sense of justice toward them.

As a result, they were easily conquered over time and became today's shining examples of 14th Amendment citizens: beneficiaries in mind and spirit. They became the exact opposite of today's shining examples of trustees in commerce because benefits accepted equal jurisdiction even if the man accepting them happens to be an internationally recognized sovereign. However, whose jurisdiction are you under if you don't accept any benefits? Can you see why trustees in commerce are in a league of their own?

CARL WEISS' CONCISE TRUSTEE HANDBOOK

This handbook is about the administration of Express Trusts created under the original American common law and functioning within the unique system of commerce in the American states, i.e., the general law merchant,<sup>1</sup> as it stands in twenty-first century America.

The material presented herein this section has been reduced from various sources which the reader is encouraged to examine for his own knowledge and further understanding. The material herein has been rendered into a concise handbook format, intended to allow the reader to refer to each section for guidance on decisions regarding the most pertinent aspects of the administration of an Express Trust. So, only secondary attention has been given to all other matters [in this handbook]. All in all, the author's objective is to devise a simple guide with clearly outlined methods for the effective handling of affairs of Express Trusts, while also showing the many options for growth and prosperity, and profound protections afforded by Express Trusts when created and administered properly.

If the reader should find, after examining the sources, that this work has failed in its objective, then let it be attributed to a fault of the author, not to any supposed faultiness of the sources or the Express Trust itself. It will be admitted by all honest and learned<sup>2</sup> lawyers (as it once was when a lawyer, by definition, was "learned in the law"<sup>3</sup>) that the Express Trust, especially one created with proper care to its instruments, is a far superior form of security, or organization in general, for individuals who desire to exercise their natural rights.

TRUST BASICS

First, it must be understood that any trust, regardless of the many designations applied to them, is, in its most basic sense, “a property interest held by one person (the trustee) at the request of another (the settlor) for the benefit of a third party (the beneficiary).”<sup>4</sup> The classification applied to a trust is based primarily upon its mode of creation, in which it may be created either by act of a party or by operation of the law. In the case of the former, trusts are divided into two types: express or implied.

Without getting into the various subclasses of express and implied trusts, the basic difference between one created by express act of a party and one created by implied act of a party is that the former is stated fully in language (oral or written), while the latter is inferred solely from the conduct of the parties. These are very generalized definitions so presented for want of space, since there are many intricacies concerning the true meaning of the term implied. (It has been shown that, in a sense, the classification of “express” trust can only be applied based on what is implied by the language of the instrument which created the trust.)<sup>5</sup> So, we won’t get into that.

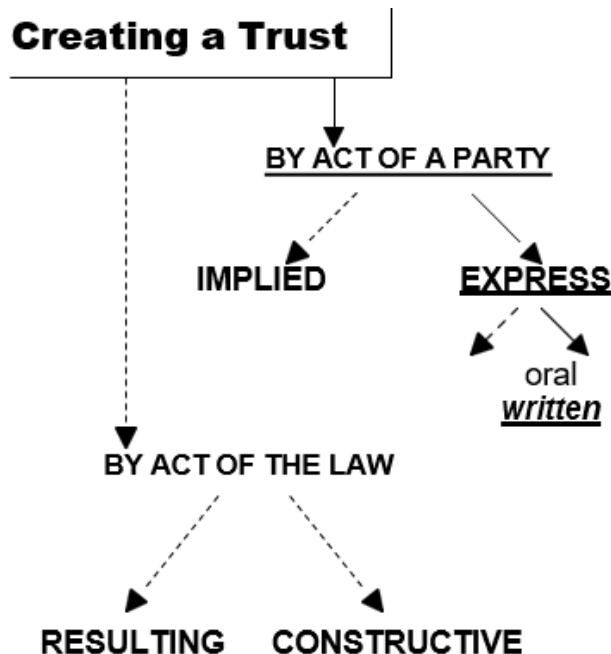

1 The general law merchant is embraced under general common law, i.e., the original and unique system of commercial law in the American states, in which there is no commerce regulation of Express Trusts except in connection with income derived from corporate stock and physical franchises under art. I, § 8, cl. 1 and 3 of the Constitution. See William A. Fletcher, THE GENERAL COMMON LAW AND SECTION 34 OF THE JUDICIARY ACT OF 1789: THE EXAMPLE OF MARINE INSURANCE, 97 Harv. L. Rev. 1513, 1514 (1984).

2 It was the strongly held belief of U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren E. Burger that seventy-five to ninety percent of all trial lawyers are either incompetent, dishonest, or both. See 102 REPORTS OF THE AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION, 205-206 (1978).

3 Black’s Law Dictionary, p. 695 (1st ed. 1891).

4 Black’s Law Dictionary, p. 1513 (7th ed. 1999). An even more basic definition is provided therein as “[t]he right, enforceable solely in equity, to the beneficial enjoyment of property to which another person holds the legal title[.]” There are many more sub-definitions, as well as expansions upon the nature of a trust relationship, being a fiduciary one, but we won’t get into them for want of space.

5 See George P. Costigan, Jr., CLASSIFICATION OF TRUSTS, 27 Harv. L. Rev. 437, 438-439 (1914).

Our focus is on a particular written express trust type, and even though the above definition is essentially accurate, it does little to define the Express Trust as it is known in its fullest sense under the protections of the common law.

EXPRESS TRUSTS UNDER THE COMMON LAW

The most adequate definition of the Express Trust is to be understood from the earlier case law which has been eloquently summed up and restated into a clear, concise definition by Alfred D. Chandler, Esq.<sup>6</sup> in a report submitted to the Tax Commissioners of Massachusetts on unincorporated associations.<sup>7</sup> His study was conducted as part of a legislative investigation into their economic effect on the state in 1911; in the first part of the report, at pages 6-7, he offers the following definition:

Express Trusts ... put the legal estate entirely in one or more [persons], while others have a beneficial interest in and out of [the] same, but are neither partners nor agents. This simple, adequate, common-law right, any person or group of persons sui juris<sup>8</sup> may exercise, the Trustees issuing certificates of beneficial [and capital] interest divided into shares, as well as issuing bonds and other obligations, as freely as they open a bank account, have a pass book, and draw and circulate checks, or make whatever contractual relations are allowed to persons as a natural right. [Italics emphasis supplied in original; bold emphasis and bracket information added.]

What becomes clear from this definition is that the Express Trust is not merely a property interest held by one for the benefit of another like any basic trust. Rather, it is a trust created by private contract for the holding of a divisible property interest wherein the trustee is empowered by the settlor to do for a beneficiary of his (the trustee's) choosing whatever he may do for himself as an individual sui juris.<sup>9</sup>

6 EXPRESS TRUSTS UNDER THE COMMON LAW: A SUPERIOR AND DISTINCT MODE OF ADMINISTRATION, DISTINGUISHED FROM PARTNERSHIPS, CONTRASTED WITH CORPORATIONS (1912).

7 Mr. Chandler lucidly brought to the attention of the Massachusetts Tax Commission the misapplication of the term voluntary association to the Express Trust. It is well-settled that "[t]he term 'association' for income tax purposes taxable as a 'corporation' embraces 'business trusts' and what Congress did not intend to embrace within the term 'association' was a pure [express] 'trust' that is a trust of traditional pattern where property is conveyed by will, deed, or declaration to a trustee[.]" PENNSYLVANIA CO. FOR INSURANCE ON LIVES AND GRANTING ANNUITIES V. U.S., 138 F.2d 869 (C.C.A.3 (Pa.) 1943). In CROCKER V. MALLEY, 249 U.S. 223, 63 L.Ed. 573 (1919) the court made it clear that a pure Express Trust, active and functioning as such, has standing in law as a trust, not an association.

8 This is defined as: "Of his own right; ... not under any legal disability, or the power of another or guardianship. Having capacity to manage one's own affairs, not under legal disability to act for one's self." Black's Law Dictionary, p. 1135 (1st ed. 1891).

9 See Pres. Woodrow Wilson's address before the American Bar Association, at Chattanooga, Tenn. (Aug. 31, 1910), entitled THE LAWYER AND THE COMMUNITY. He says: "... liberty is always personal, never aggregate; always a thing inhering in individuals taken singly, never in groups or corporations or communities. The individual unit of society is the individual." It has long been held that trustees of Express Trusts have greater latitude than ordinary trustees, simply because such trusts, created by individuals sui juris, may do whatever individuals sui juris may do.

What has been created here is a trust organization, lawfully, by natural right. "As a general proposition, it may be asserted that one who creates a trust may mold it into whatever form he pleases, and that whatever one may lawfully do himself he may authorize another to do for him."<sup>10</sup> Doing so requires no benefit, privilege or franchise from any government or other outside-party;<sup>11</sup> and, therefore the parties owe no duty to any government or other outside-party to the extent that no common-law criminal or civil wrong is the purpose of the contract.<sup>12</sup>

When done properly the trust is afforded all the common-law protections ordinarily given to private contracts, particularly the obligation of them.<sup>13</sup> Now, the question is whether the parties to the contract are truly acting sui juris, i.e., of their pure, unadulterated common-law (natural) rights, because if the parties import or associate benefits which grant an outside party a vested interest in the proposed contract, then the contract has acquired a third-party overseer/intervenor.<sup>14</sup>

DECLARATION OF THE EXPRESS TRUST

The Declaration of Trust<sup>15</sup> is the trust instrument that constitutes the trust. It has been noted in trust law that no technical expressions are required to create a valid declaration, so long as the words used make clear the settlor's intent to create the trust or confer a benefit of some sort that would be best carried out in the form of a trust.<sup>16</sup> A trust instrument doesn't necessarily need to be a declaration either, for a trust may be, and often is, formed out of a simple agreement or even a will.<sup>17</sup> But with an Express Trust, the declaration has been preferred since the beginnings of trusts under the common law of England, which otherwise shunned fictions of law. This is where careful attention to detail is most crucial, because in order to properly construe the intent of the settlor, the objects, property, and manner in which all is to be carried out must be set forth in unambiguous, precise language so as to particularly create the Express Trust; and where the intent of the settlor is unclear, under equity, interpretation is required to construe the intent of the parties, and the trust may be deemed invalid, depending on the degree of ambiguity.<sup>18</sup> However, when all is done properly, obviously, there can be no lawful impairment of the obligations of contract.<sup>19</sup>

<sup>10</sup> HARWOOD V. TRACY, 118 Mo. 631, 24 S.W. 214, 216; see also SHAW V. PAINE, 12 Mass. 293; “... a person who creates a trust may mould it into whatever form he pleases.” PERRY ON TRUSTS, I, § 67, 287 (4th Amer. ed.); UNDERHILL ON TRUSTS, p. 57 (Amer. ed.).

<sup>11</sup> See HALE V. HENKEL, 201 U.S. 43, 74 (1906).

<sup>12</sup> LAWSON ON CONTRACTS § 294, p. 381 (3d ed. 1923).

<sup>13</sup> In BERRY V. MCCOURT, 204 N.E.2d 235, 240 (1965) the court held that the Express Trust is a “contractual relationship based on trust form” and in SMITH V. MORSE, 2 Cal. 524, it was held that any law or procedure in its operation denying or obstructing contract rights impairs the contractual obligation and is, therefore, violative of Article I, Section 10 of the Constitution. Because the Express Trust is created by the exercise of the natural right to contract, which cannot be abridged, the agreement, when executed, becomes protected under federally enforceable right of contract law and not under laws passed by any of the several state legislatures. In ELIOT V. FREEMAN, 220

U.S. 178 (1911), the court made it clear that the Express Trust is not subject to legislative control. It went further to acknowledge the right-wise stance of the United States Supreme Court that the trust relationship comes under the realm of equity, based upon the common-law right of contract, and is not subject to legislative restrictions as are corporations and other organizations created by legislative authority. To clarify the equity and common-law distinctions, the basis for Express Trusts under the common law in this instance, is not that such organizations are creatures of common law, as distinguished from equity, but that they are created under the common law of contracts and do not depend upon any statute.

<sup>14</sup> See Lee Brobst et al., U.S.A. THE REPUBLIC, IS THE HOUSE THAT NO ONE LIVES IN, available at <http://usa-the-republic.com/Lee\_Brobst/usa.html> (last visited June. 1, 2020).

<sup>15</sup> This is sometimes referred to as the trust indenture for the purpose of denoting that it outlines the terms and conditions governing the conduct of the trustee as an indentured servant to the beneficiary under contractual arrangement (referred to in this sense as an indenture trustee).

<sup>16</sup> See Underhill, supra at art. 3, p. 10; see also CHICAGO M. & ST. PR. CO. V. DES MOINES UNION R. CO., 254 U.S. 196, 65 L.Ed. 219 (1920).

<sup>17</sup> UNDERHILL ON TRUSTS, art. 5, p. 19 (Lond. ed. 1878).

<sup>18</sup> Id. at p. 11. [Id. or idem is a Latin term meaning “the same”; used in legal citations to denote the previously cited source.]

<sup>19</sup> See the Constitution for the United States of America, art. I, § 10 (1789): “No State shall ... pass any ... Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts[.]”

Moreover, the declaration, by its terms and provisions, serves to establish the entire contractual arrangement, including the identities and positions of the parties, the trust’s name, jurisdiction and situs, and all particulars of administration, all of which the courts of equity will fully support by the principle that equity compels performance.<sup>20</sup>

The ultimate result is the creation of a bona fide legal entity<sup>21</sup> with its own separate and distinct juridical personality;<sup>22</sup> with standing to sue and be sued,<sup>23</sup> and to function as a person in commerce by and through its trustee(s). The term natural person has been applied to Express Trusts by courts of equity because of its administration, being carried out by men acting as natural persons.<sup>24</sup> Under this application, the trust’s right of contract is alienable, whereas its creators’ natural right of contract obviously is not.<sup>25</sup> The Express Trust nevertheless possesses, inter alia, the right to all enjoyments stemming from the contracts into which it enters, as well as all the obligations imposed under such contracts.

<sup>20</sup> See CLEWS V. JAMIESON, 182 U.S. 461, 21 S.Ct. 845, 45 L.Ed. 1183 (1901).

<sup>21</sup> See BURNETT V. SMITH, S.W. 1007 (1922); and MUIR V. C.I.R., 182 F.2d 819 (C.A.4 1950).

<sup>22</sup> See BRIGHAM V. U.S., 38 F.Supp. 625 (D.C.Mass. 1941), appeal dismissed 122 F.2d 792 (reported in Title 26 I.R.C. 31, p. 356).

<sup>23</sup> See WATERMAN V. MACKENZIE, 138 U.S. 252 (1891).

<sup>24</sup> A generally unknown fact is that there are several types of citizens now existing in America. The trustee(s) of an Express Trust may seek protection under the Constitutions as state citizens throughout the “Union” of states, a jurisdiction outside the scope of the 14th Amendment which we will discuss in a later section. However, it should also be noted of all citizenship, 14th Amendment or otherwise, that jurisdiction over natural and artificial persons is distinguished without a fundamental difference. This stems, surprisingly, from the operation of in rem jurisdiction which underlies all Civil Law. Though all courts are familiar with the action in personam (against persons), it is the action in rem (against things) which, though practiced only in Maritime Law, stealthily operates in every civil and criminal court. This principle is one of the least understood in its entirety.

in rem jurisdiction over a man or woman can only exist if the man or woman is a slave, i.e., property or res (an object), in which case his or her disposition at law is no different than if he or she were a horse or other goods. See THE ZONG (GREGSON V. GILBERT), 99 E.R. 3:233 (K.B. 1783). In nature, in rem jurisdiction is exercised over men and women by their Creator, exclusively. Governments can therefore gain only a fictional in rem jurisdiction over men by creating various legal devices (personas) for those men to assume limited control of (e.g., citizen, taxpayer, driver, etc.). Since the device is legal fiction, a falsehood made true by force of law, this persona is in-fact a legal object or res. Just as in theatre, the persona (“person”) is separate from the man or woman playing the part; therefore, there may be artificial persons, but not artificial men; natural persons, but not natural men. AMERICAN LAW & PROCEDURE, vol. XIII, ch. V, § 65, pp. 156-157:

“The word ‘person’ is defined. Gaius says ‘De juris divisione’ (the divisions of law) immediately preceding his division of the law; then follows, ‘De conditione hominum’ (meaning the condition or status of men).”

“In the Institutes ‘De jura personarum’ precedes the expression ‘all our [civil] law relates either to persons, or to things, or to actions.’ The words persona and personae did not have the meaning in the Roman which attaches to homo, the individual, or a man in the English; it had a peculiar reference to artificial beings, and the condition or status of individuals.” [Citations omitted; bold and italics emphasis added.]

In footnote 33, we get at the modern application and its implications:

“... The word ‘person,’ in its primitive and natural sense, signifies the mask with which actors, who played dramatic pieces in Rome and Greece, covered their heads. These pieces were played in public places, and afterwards in such vast amphitheatres that it was impossible for a man to make himself heard by all the spectators [and later by all judges]. Recourse was had to art; the head of each actor was enveloped with a mask, the figure of which represented the part he was to play, and it was so contrived that the opening for the emission of his voice made the sounds clearer and more resounding, vox peronabat, when the name persona was given to the instrument or mask which facilitated the resounding of his [legal] voice. The name persona was afterwards applied to the part itself which the actor had undertaken to play, because the face of the mask was adopted to the age and character of him who was considered as speaking, and sometimes it was his own portrait. It is in this last sense of personage, or of the part which an individual plays, that the word persona is employed in jurisprudence, in opposition to the word man, homo. When we speak of a person, we only consider the state of the man, the part he plays in society, abstractly, without considering the individual.” 1 Bouv. Inst., note 1. [Bold and italics emphasis, and bracket information added.]

Logic follows that if the man plays no part in a society, then he has no personal attachment or obligation thereto. The trustee(s) under a declaration of an Express Trust are only persons in the private sense because he is only a person once he has accepted the role offered to him by the settlor. Private persons may also pursue constitutional protection as natural persons, “citizens” within the meaning of Article IV, Section 2 of the Constitution, and may thereby claim entitlement to all the “privileges and immunities” of same. See generally PAUL V. VIRGINIA, 75 U.S. 168 (1868). Even though, in today’s economic situation the term “citizen” is presumed to signify the 14th Amendment citizen, the term cannot be applied to Express Trusts when administered properly. In contrast, corporations, as artificial persons, are “citizens of the United States,” within the meaning of the 14th Amendment per SANTA CLARA COUNTY V. SOUTHERN PACIFIC R. CO., 118 U.S. 394, 396 (1886).

25 Man’s right of contract is considered so fundamental that even under Roman law, in its system of domestic slavery, all men, citizen or not, with the exception of slaves (the only non-persons) retained this fundamental right ius gentium. It is understood to derive from a man’s Creator, and therefore is unalienable, even with his own consent/waiver. Man’s right of contract, logically, is held by him in trust to his Creator as property which has been settled upon him, and thus can never be contracted away because such would invalidate the original contract itself.

The Express Trust possesses the ability to hold/own property, engage in business transactions, and incur liabilities (including tax liabilities) as well as assume creditorship (including Secured Party Creditor status), like any other legal person.

THE TRUST CORPUS

The Corpus is the “body” of the trust, i.e., the property being held in trust for the beneficiary(s), the very subject-matter of the declaration. It should be noted that virtually anything<sup>26</sup> may be held in trust, however, there are certain things which, given their innate traits recognized in Law, make for better subject-matter, so to speak.

Initially, the legal minds who perfected the Express Trust in America did so to accommodate for the great obstacles in procuring special charters for corporations intended to deal in real estate, which trusts eventually came to be known as the “Massachusetts Land Trusts.” It was when those individuals came to realize the immense benefits of employing the trusts for the purpose of holding land, that they eventually expanded their utility to include the holding of personal property; these eventually came to be known as the “Massachusetts Electric Companies.” As an aside, when considering the presently hostile official attitude toward non-statutory trusts, what is interesting to note is that much of the Express Trust’s perfection is attributed to Attorney General and later United States Secretary of State Richard Olney;<sup>27</sup> but the fact that the Express Trusts were initially, primarily utilized for purposes of holding and handling real estate is very significant, especially to our present situation.

The significance derives, in pertinent part, from the integral relationship between the law and the land. It is a fundamental principle of law that the land and the law go hand in hand; and, in America, without the 14th Amendment [turning humans into fraudulent corporations], the Law of the Land is the Constitution with its common-law principles and its substance of gold and silver.<sup>28</sup> Referred to in this sense, precious metals are regarded in law as portable land. The basic principle of law holds that land includes everything of value extracted from it, and without getting too deep into the operation of common law, it is this principle regarding the relationship of land and law which, by its operation, threw up an obstacle to corporate real estate ownership. In order to charter a statutory (civil law) entity to handle the substance of the common law (land), special, if not extraordinary, legal circumstances must exist. These circumstances did not exist prior to the post-Erie Federal Common Law<sup>29</sup> whose imposition was made possible by loss of the gold standard (the substance of the law) in 1933.<sup>30</sup>

<sup>26</sup> The “thing” held in trust is referred to as the trust res, the subject-matter of the trust.

<sup>27</sup> See John H. Sears, DECLARATIONS OF TRUST AS EFFECTIVE SUBSTITUTIONS FOR INCORPORATION, § 1, p. 4 (1911). Olney served as Attorney General in 1893-1895, U.S. Secretary of State in 1895-1897, and prior to that in the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1874.

<sup>28</sup> Referred to in this sense, it is regarded in law as portable land. The basic principle of law is that the land includes everything of value extracted from it.

<sup>29</sup> See Lee Brobst et al., THE LAW, THE MONEY AND YOUR CHOICE (2003), available at <http://www.usa-the-republic.com/Lee\_Brobst/The%20Law.html> (last visited June 1, 2020).

<sup>30</sup> See House Joint Resolution 192 of June 5, 1933; Pub. L. 73-10. Prior to that, silver had already been de-monetized, in practice but not in fact, by the Coinage Act of 1873 (commonly referred to as the “crime of ‘73” which, it is blatantly obvious, would have been unconstitutional if done in-fact. It is said to have been a tactic of congress to place in the public mind the perception of the currency as being solely backed by gold, presumably for the purpose of the eventual passing of H.J. Res. 192, which congress knew would effect a removal of the substance of law). Silver was later withdrawn from circulation in certain coins by the Coinage Act of 1964, and was removed entirely by amendment to the Coinage Act of 1964 by the Bank Holding Company Act of 1970. Then, all silver-backed certificates were discontinued in 1972.

A statutory entity is inherently accountable to courts of civil (legislative) jurisdiction, deriving subject-matter jurisdiction from the corporate charter, over which the legislature holds in rem jurisdiction as well by way of possession of the charter documents themselves. Whereas, an Express Trust is obviously inherently accountable to courts of common law and equity,<sup>31</sup> deriving subject-matter jurisdiction from the trust instrument and corpus. As logic follows, in rem jurisdiction remains with the trustee at all times unless the trust instrument and corpus are surrendered to a third-party voluntarily.

In rem* jurisdiction, i.e., actual possession, is the key. This brings us to today. In the jurisdiction of the 14th Amendment United States public trust, precious metal, the substance of the common law, is legally merely a commodity. Back in the Republic, however, it remains the staple for payment of debts,<sup>32</sup> though surface gold and silver are in considerably lesser quantity and without a fixed standard upon which to be traded. The Express Trust under the common law, holding real estate, silver or gold, is holding the very substance of the law under which it was created, thus ensuring that bond between law and land, and the powers and guarantees that come with it.<sup>33</sup>

CERTIFICATES

What may come as a surprise is that any trust may divide its trust property into shares and issue certificates.<sup>34</sup> The power to issue certificates and bonds, and employ the use of an official seal<sup>35</sup> never has been restricted to corporations.<sup>36</sup> It is well-settled law that whatever else most corporations possess beyond their artificiality and right of suit in a corporate name is a mere incident or consequence of incorporation, and not a “primary constituent.”<sup>37</sup> In fact, most attributes now commonly held as “corporate” in nature, such as the power of issuing transferable shares, limiting liability of officers, using an official seal, making by-laws, purchasing lands and chattels, are merely the legislative recognition and adoption of natural common-law rights any man or woman sui juris may exercise without permission (much less a charter) from the state.

31 It should be noted that though the Express Trust is created under common law, it is not a creature of the common law as distinguished from equity, but rather, it is created under common law of contracts and not dependent upon any statutes; Equity supplements the common law. See generally SCHUMANN-HEINK V. FOLSUM, 328 Ill. 321. And though the trust may bring an action in Admiralty, it is not inherently accountable to that jurisdiction.

32 See Constitution for the United States of America, art. I, § 10 (1789).

33 See Bill of Rights, amend. VII (1791).

34 See HART V. SEYMOUR, 147 Ill. 598, 35 N.E. 246; and VENNER V. CHICAGO CITY RY. CO., 258 Ill. 523, 101 N.E. 949.

35 As a side-note, the right of an individual using a seal has never been challenged, based upon the universal understanding that it is used as a matter of right. Once the trustee has adopted the seal and has used it, it is automatically presumed that the use is lawful, until proven otherwise. See JOHNSON V. CRAWLEY, 25 Ga. 316, 71 Am.Dec. 173; and MULLANPHY V. SCHOTT, 135 Ill. 655, 26 N.E. 640.

36 See THOMPSON-BUSINESS TRUSTS § 23; SEARS TRUST ESTATE § 105 (2d ed.); and PHILLIPS V. BLATCHFORD, 137 Mass. 510.

37 See WALD'S POLLOCK ON CONTRACTS, pp. 126, 296.

38 23 Wend. 103, 145-146 et seq.

The court in Warner v. Beers<sup>38</sup> clarified this principle most effectively:

There are several very useful and beneficial accessary [also spelled accessory] powers or attributes, very often accompanying corporate privileges, especially in moneyed corporations, which, in the existing state of our law, as modified by statutes, are more prominent in the public eye, and perhaps sometimes in the view of our courts and legislatures,<sup>39</sup> than those which are essential to the being of a corporation. Such added powers, however valuable, are merely accessary. They do not in themselves alone confirm a corporate character, and may be enjoyed by unincorporated individuals. Such a power is the transferability of shares... . Such, too, is the limited responsibility [liability]... . So, too, the convenience of holding real estate for the common purposes, exempt from the legal inconvenience of joint tenancy or tenancy in common. Again: There is the continuance of the joint property for the benefit and preservation of the common fund, indissoluble by death or legal disability of any partner. Every one of these attributes or powers, though commonly falling within our notions of a moneyed corporation, is quite unessential to the legality of a corporation, may be found where there is no pretense of a body corporate; nor will they make one if all were combined, without the presence of the essential quality of legal individuality[.] [Italics and bold emphasis, and bracket information added.]

The trustee of an Express Trust is empowered by the terms and provisions of the trust instrument to issue certificates not only of beneficial interest,<sup>40</sup> but also of capital interest.<sup>41</sup> Generally speaking, beneficial interest is that which is held by the beneficiary(s) of the trust, who is entitled to a certain proportional share of the trust assets during the life or at the termination of the trust; while capital interest is that which is held by the exchanger(s) who has invested property into the trust, and thus becomes entitled to a certain proportional share of any profits and assets remaining at the termination of the trust.

As a rule, the terms and provisions of the trust instrument control the manner in which beneficial and capital interest are to be administered. It should define the rights of interest-holders, who, incidental to their acceptance of the interest, are bound under the trust instrument to that extent.<sup>42</sup> But there are certain principles which govern these interests in construing the fundamental classification of the trust. For instance, it is held that where the certificate-holders have control over the trust property and/or administration of the trust's affairs, the trust arrangement is, in fact, a partnership, in which the shareholders become liable for the acts of the trust.<sup>43</sup> The basic principle is that if it is free from the control of its interest-holders, then it is an Express Trust.<sup>44</sup> This is commonly referred to by courts of equity as the “Control Test,”<sup>45</sup> in which, control must ultimately rest with the trustee(s) of the trust in order for it to be properly classified as an Express Trust.

<sup>39</sup> I will show you in the conclusion why this is the state of affairs today, as it was back then, and why the principles interpreted by the court in this case apply now more than ever.

<sup>40</sup> Also referred to as trust certificates or certificates of trust units.

<sup>41</sup> Also referred to as capital certificates or certificates of capital units.

<sup>42</sup> See HARDEE V. ADAMS OIL ASSN., 254 S.W. 602 (1923); TODD V. FORD, 92 Colo. 392; and WEIMER & CO. V. DOWNS, INC., 77 Colo. 377.

<sup>43</sup> See RAND V. MORSE, 289 Fed. 339 (C.C.A.8 (Mo.) 1923); GOLDWATER V. OLTMAN, 210 Cal. 408; SCHUMANN-HEINK V. FOLSOM, supra; FIRST NATIONAL BANK V. CHARTER, 305 Mass. 316; and NEVILLE V. CLIFFORD, 242 Mass. 124. See, for examples of what will constitute a co-partnership, TAFT V. WARD, 106 Mass. 518; and PHILLIPS V. BLATCHFORD, supra.

<sup>44</sup> Id.

<sup>45</sup> See BANK OF AMERICA NAT. TRUST & SAVINGS ASS’N V. SCULLY, 92 F.2d 97 (C.C.A.10 (Colo.) 1937); RAND V. MORSE, Id.; GOLDWATER V. OLTMAN, 210 Cal. 408; SCHUMANN-HEINK V. FOLSOM, Id.; FIRST NATIONAL BANK V. CHARTER, Id.; COMMERCIAL CASUALTY INS. CO. V. PEARCE, 320 Ill.App. 221; ROSEMOND V. MARCH, 287 Mich. 580 (Rehearing denied, 287 Mich. 270); NELVILLE V. CLIFFORD, Id.; CARLING V. BUDDY, 318 Mo. 784 (IN RE WINTER, 133 N.J.Eq., 245); and RHODE ISLAND TRUST CO. V. COPELAND, 39 R.I. 193.

The well-settled principle applied by courts of equity is that interest-holders, by full legal title and control over the trust property being vested absolutely in the trustee(s), cannot be considered partners nor agents,<sup>46</sup> and therefore cannot be held liable for the debts of the trust in that manner.<sup>47</sup>

Furthermore, the certificates have no determinable fair market value, and, therefore, no gain or loss is recognized until the cost or other basis of the property disposed of has been recovered.<sup>48</sup> In Commissioner of Internal Revenue v. Marshman,<sup>49</sup> the court held that fair market value is determined by property received by the taxpayer, not the fair market value of the property transferred by the taxpayer into the trust. What’s more is that certificates are considered not necessarily as chattels, but as documentary evidence of ownership and intangible rights;<sup>50</sup> and, in and of themselves, they are only personal property,<sup>51</sup> not the actual interest or share itself.<sup>52</sup> The interest in an Express Trust, cannot be traded without the approval of the trustee(s). This is contrasted with the certificate of stock, which courts have long held may be dealt with in the market as a “commercial document of value.”<sup>53</sup>

TRUSTEE BASICS

First and foremost, anyone (man or person) capable of taking physical possession of or legal title to property can be a trustee [typically age dependent in most lands].<sup>54</sup> And there is no limit to the number of trustees who may serve in any one trust. Generally, where there is more than one trustee, the trustees, with respect to each other, are referred to as co-trustees,<sup>55</sup> and when acting jointly as a collective body are referred to as the Board of Trustees.

Furthermore, there is no law prescribing the character of a trustee, and while it has been held that a trust cannot be invalidated simply due to incompetence, the trustee should be at least someone capable and fit for executing the powers and duties honorably.<sup>56</sup> (This is the basis for the general rule that beneficiaries are not desirable as trustees, though there is no law to forbid such appointment. Equity will generally avoid all temptation to a breach of trust.)

46 See MAVO V. MORITZ, 151 Mass. 481, 484, 24 N.E. 1083 (1890); MASON V. POMEROY, 151 Mass. 164, 7 L.R.A. 771; JOHNSON V. LEWIS, 6 Fed. 27, 28 (C.C.Ark. 1881); TAYLOR V. MAYO, 110 U.S. 330, 334-335, 28 L.Ed. 163, 165 (1884); LACKETT V. RUMBAUGH, 45 Fed. 23, 29 (C.C.N.C. 1891); and SMITH V. ANDERSON, L.R. 15, Ch. D, 247, 275-276, 284-285.

47 See IN RE CONOVER, 295 Ill.App. 443; and GRECO V. HUBBARD, 242 Mass. 37.

48 See Master Tax Guide, para. 910. In regard to Capital Certificates, the courts have long upheld the doctrine of exchange, in that certificates in exchange are not taxable until a realized gain has occurred. See BURNET V. LOGAN, 283 U.S. 404 (1931); and TRENTON COTTON OIL CO. V. COMMISSIONER, 147 F.2d 33 (C.C.A.6 1945).

49 279 F.2d 27 (C.A.6 1960).

50 See GOODHUE V. STATE ST. TRUST CO., 267 Mass. 28.

51 See PARKER V. MONA-MARIE TRUST, 278 S.E. 321; and IN RE PITTSBURG WAGON WORKS' ESTATE, 204 Pa. 432, 54 A. 316.

52 See MALLEY V. BOWDITCH, 259 Fed. 809 (C.C.A.1 (Mass.) 1919).

53 See Joseph H. Beale, THE EXERCISE OF JURISDICTION IN REM TO COMPEL PAYMENT OF A DEBT, 27 Harv. L. Rev. 107, 111 (1913), citing STERN V. QUEEN, (1896) 1 Q.B. 211; PINNEY V. NEVILLS, 86 Fed. 97 (C.C.Mass. 1898); et cetera.

54 See BEACH'S COMMENTARIES ON THE LAW OF TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES, vol. I, ch. III, § 23, p. 30 (1897). Even a thief is considered, by operation of trust law, to be a constructive trustee.

55 This term is sometimes used to denote that the co-trustee has less authority than the trustee. In that sense, the co-trustee is called a passive trustee, and the trustee an active trustee. But Express Trusts usually employ the term co-trustee simply to denote that there are several trustees of that trust.

56 Beach, supra. Beach describes this concept as “in such a manner as to subserve the interests of the beneficiary[.]”

The trustee should be stationed within the jurisdiction of the court of equity in which the estate is located, if indeed the trust corpus is an estate. But where the trust corpus is portable land [like a silver coin], the trustee need not be stationed within any single jurisdiction. Non-residency will not disqualify or preclude the trustee from carrying out his position.<sup>57</sup>

As far as accepting the appointment is concerned, this should be done formally, expressly in writing, even though it will always be implied “if the individual intermeddles with the trust property, or performs any act to carry out the trust.”<sup>58</sup> Once acceptance has been tendered, no court of common law or equity can prevent the trustee from holding that office, except for breach of trust<sup>59</sup> or good cause dependent upon clear and lawful necessity.<sup>60</sup> Removal must be procured pursuant to the provisions of the declaration, or, where no such provisions are made, by decree of a court of equity.

Lastly, it should be noted that the office of trustee is not always a desirable one. When the trust instrument conveys a burdensome obligation, the trustee is miserable and at risk of breach by failure to perform; when the trust instrument has been constructed poorly, the trustee is miserably confined and inhibited and he may well be held liable for trust contracts with outside parties.

The trustee has a duty of care toward the beneficiary(s), and must harbor no biases or resentment in administration; therefore, it is prudent to empower the trustee with enough discretion to carry out his position to the best of his ability and responsible creativity. To put it plainly, the settlor must truly trust the trustee to carry out his duties, and use his powers justly.

POWERS & DUTIES OF THE TRUSTEE

The powers of a trustee are divided into three categories: general, special and discretionary. The general are all those inherent in trustees virtute officii, i.e., ordinarily conferred by trust law; the special are all those conferred by the trust instrument; and the discretionary are all those arising out of the necessity of personal judgment (though broad discretion may also be conferred by law and as well as by trust instrument).<sup>61</sup> It is well-settled law that under a declaration of trust, the trustees must have all the powers necessary to carry out the obligation of that private contract which they have assumed.<sup>62</sup>

Furthermore, it is settled that the trustees of an Express Trust are afforded greater latitude to carry out their duties than ordinary trustees.<sup>63</sup> The trustees are empowered to control every aspect of the trust according to the trust instrument and equity, and retain the power to remove even the beneficiary(s) from the premises.<sup>64</sup>

57 Id. at § 19, p. 28.

58 August P. Loring, A TRUSTEE'S HANDBOOK, pt. I, § 3, p. 5 (1898).

59 See IN RE TEMPEST, (L.R. 1 Ch. 487), 31, 1431: Lord Justice Turner settled the rule of law that “[f]irst the court will have regard to the wishes of the persons by whom the trust has been created, if expressed in the instrument creating the trust, or clearly to be collected from it... . If the author of the trust has in terms declared ... a particular person ... [t]he court in those cases conforms to the wishes of the [creator].” A Breach of Trust does not include a technical breach of trust, e.g., one made through mistake.

60 See Loring, supra at § 8, p. 19. The reasons are generally for guilt of willful breach of trust, waste or mismanagement of trust property, refusal to account to beneficiary, lunacy, drunkenness, bad habits or carelessness which endangers the trust property, or improvidence.

61 See Beach, supra at vol. II, ch. XXI, § 427-435, pp. 986-1006.

62 See BOYD V. U.S., 116 U.S. 616 (1886); and SILVERTHORNE LUMBER CO. V. U.S., 251 U.S. 385 (1920)

63 See ASHWORTH V. HAGAN ESTATES, 181 S.E. 383 (1935).

64 See DEVEN V. HENDERSHOTT, 32 Iowa 192.

These powers include, but are in no way limited to—

- The power to bind the trust in a contract, especially where such obligation is implied- by-law,<sup>65</sup> and the power to contract with the beneficiary(s);
- The power to partition, exchange, sell, pledge or mortgage the trust property, either in whole or in part;<sup>66</sup>
- The power to lease trust property;<sup>67</sup>
- The power to issue, change, or otherwise dispose of securities of the trust;
- The power to support the beneficiary(s) in all reasonable manner;
- The power to prosecute and defend in the trust’s name or trustee’s name;
- The power to make gifts out of trust property;
- The power to delegate all unessential powers and duties; and
- The power to exercise personal judgment and every discretionary power not prohibited by the trust instrument.<sup>68</sup> He may do whatever a man may lawfully do according to natural right.

The fundamental principle of law is that for every power there is a correlative duty. The trustee, as a fiduciary to the beneficiary(s), assumes certain basic duties outside of the management of trust property, and other general duties aside from whatever specific duties may be conferred upon the trustee in the trust instrument. These duties include, but are not limited to—

- The duty to support the beneficiary(s) in any essential needs which it may have, out of the funds which would otherwise be paid to it in distribution. And if such funds are not available, the duty to accumulate any balance needed;<sup>69</sup>
- The duty to refrain from taking advantage of peculiar knowledge or position when dealing directly with the beneficiary(s);
- The duty to exercise the utmost good faith in all concerns of the trust, whether dealing with the trust property itself, or directly with the beneficiary(s) in matters concerning the trust,<sup>70</sup> including to care for, protect and secure the trust property;
- The duty to preserve, protect and further the trust’s interests according to the purposes designated in the trust instrument, including pressing all reasonable demands and prosecuting and fending off all claims, and claiming all available exceptions and taking all available remedies and advantages in trust matters;
- When delegating unessential powers and duties, the duty to exercise at least a general supervision of the trust affairs, and to perform any ministerial acts which require the exercise of discretion or judgment;<sup>71</sup>

65 See DURKIN V. LANGLEY, 167 Mass. 577; PERRY ON TRUSTS, supra at § 437, p. 120; HAPGOOD V. HOUGHTON, 10 Pick. 154. Cf. Comp. Law Dak. (1887), § 3946; Rev. Code N. Dak. (1895), § 4289; and Civ. Code Cal. (1885), § 2267.

66 See Loring, supra at pt. II, § 3, pp. 54-69. It should be noted that even though the trustee may have sold the entire trust estate, the trust is not necessarily terminated until all obligations of the trust arrangement have been fulfilled, especially the transferring of the proceeds to the interest-holder(s).

67 It is a general rule that if, without adequate provision, the trustees lease property outside of the powers granted to them by the trust instrument, such an act will constitute breach of trust. Again, it all comes back to the design of the trust instrument.

68 See James Hill, A PRACTICAL TREATISE ON THE LAW RELATING TO TRUSTEES, THEIR POWERS, DUTIES, PRIVILEGES AND LIABILITIES, pt. III, div. I, ch. II, § 3, pp. 471-495.

69 See Loring, supra at pt. II, § 4, p. 69. “[The trustee’s] fealty is to the trust, and all his acts must be governed by strict loyalty to it and the interests of the beneficiaries; and any act which is not in the interest of the beneficiaries is a breach of trust.”

70 Id. at p. 72.

71 See PERRY ON TRUSTS, supra at § 409, p. 49. It is completely lawful and equitable for a trustee to appoint an Authorized Representative to act as agent in collecting rents and dividends, keep books and minutes, and, in general, act for the trustee wherever there is a moral or legal necessity to employ such an agent. (Necessity may be determined to exist where the ordinarily prudent businessman would employ an agent in his own affairs. See EX PARTE BELCHIER, Amb. 219.)

- The duty to keep minutes, and separate accounts of the trust, even if kept in a book with other accounts, with minutes showing decisions and resolutions reached, and accounts showing the state of the trust and pertinent details of transactions (generally in the form of schedules of income received, income paid, additions to principal, deductions from principal, principal on hand, and changes in investment consisting of debtor and creditor sides);<sup>72</sup>
- Upon acceptance of the trusteeship, the duty to secure and protect the trust property and trust documents;<sup>73</sup>
- When investing trust funds, the duty to invest them securely, “so that they shall be preserved intact for the remainderman,” and to invest productively, “so that they shall yield [at least] the current rate of interest to the life tenant;”<sup>74</sup> and
- The duty to concur with all co-trustees, except where authorized to act individually.<sup>75</sup>

PRIVILEGES & LIABILITIES OF THE TRUSTEE

In addition to powers and duties, there are certain privileges (including allowances), rights and liabilities of the trustee. These are all those which are enumerated in the trust instrument and naturally extended to the trustee of an Express Trust. As was noted earlier, certain restrictions placed upon trustees of ordinary trusts do not apply to the trustee of an Express Trust pursuant to the doctrine of greater latitude.<sup>76</sup> These, aside from those allowed by the trust instrument, include, but are not limited to—

- The inherent, unquestionable right to full compensation, including reimbursement of all out-of-pocket and other expenses incurred in the discharge of duties. (And unduly withheld reimbursement results in a lien on the trust for the amount plus interest);<sup>77</sup>
- The privilege of residing within the trust estate and allowance of rates and taxes “although he [the trustee] has the benefit of residing in the house;”<sup>78</sup>
- The right to employ a solicitor<sup>79</sup> for assistance and guidance in the administration of the trust, and, in the case of any doubt or difficulty, to seek the opinion of competent counsel, and, in the case where the trust’s accounts are intricate and complicated, to seek the assistance of an accountant—to the charge of the trust;
- The right to apply to a court of equity for directions in the execution of the trust, or to obtain a declaratory judgment to establish the meaning and intent of the trust instrument;<sup>80</sup>

72 This is not required, but the rule of thumb is that the more detail kept, the better the accounting. The trustee is accountable to the beneficiary(s), and the accounts must ultimately balance out in the end. And an account settled in a court of equity is final; it cannot be reopened except to correct a mistake or fraud, and its correctness cannot be questioned in a collateral proceeding in equity or in a court of law. See STETSON V. BASS, 9 Pick. 26, 29; DODD V. WINSHIP, 144 Mass. 461; SEVER V. RUSSELL, 4 Cush. 513; and PARCHER V. BUSSELL, 11 Cush. 107.

73 See HALLOWS V. LLOYD, 39 Ch. Div. 686, 691; Underhill, supra at p. 219.

74 Loring, supra at pt. II, § 4, p. 95. Generally, where it is impossible to comply with the investments required by the trust instrument, a trustee has recourse to apply to a court of equity for directions. See MCINTIRE'S ADM'N V. ZANESVILLE, 17 Ohio St. 352.

75 See James Hill, supra at pt. III, div. I, ch. I, § 1, pp. 305-309; BROWN V. DONALD, 216 S.W.2d 679 (1949); MELDON V. DEVLIN, 31 App.Div. 146, 53 N.Y.Sup. 172; BARROLL V. FOREMAN, 88 Md. 188, 40 A. 883; and APPEAL OF FESMIRE, 134 Pa. 67, 19 A. 592.

76 See ASHWORTH V. HAGAN ESTATES, supra.

77 James Hill supra at pt. IV, div. II, ch. IV, pp. 570-571. "Such is the rule of courts of equity, and such also is the rule at common law." Quoting Lord Cottenham in ATT.-GEN. V. MAYOR OF NORWICH, 2 M. & Cr. 406, 424. See also REX V. INHABITANTS OF ESSEX, 4 T.R. 591; and REX V. COMMISSIONERS OF SEWERS, 1 B. & Adolph 232.

78 Id. "However a trustee who employs a park-keeper, or other servant, for his own purposes, must pay him himself, and will not be allowed his wages out of the estate. And so a trustee, with the most ample powers of management, cannot of his own authority keep up a mere pleasurable establishment, such as gamekeepers, &c."

79 This is defined as "[a] person who conducts matters on another's behalf; an agent or representative." Black's Law Dictionary, p. 1399 (7th ed. 1999).

80 See DUNBAR V. REDFIELD, 7 Cal.2d 515.

- The right to carry on in separate business for the benefit of the trust given certain conditions;
- The allowance of remuneration for loss of time under certain circumstances;
- The right not to be compelled by subpoena or review to produce and show records or books to outside parties;<sup>81</sup>
- The right to further limit his liability in particular contracts, even beyond the limitation made in the trust instrument;
- The right to relocate, move trust property, or change the trust's domicile;<sup>82</sup> and
- The inalienable right to disclaim the office at the execution, or resign at a later date.

With regard to the personal liabilities of a trustee, basically, the inherent liabilities (and non-liabilities) are all those incident to ownership at law<sup>83</sup> and imposed or exempted under contract law, for it is a maxim of law: le contrat fait la loi.<sup>84</sup> Therefore, a trustee's liability is largely determined according to the particular circumstances of the situation, especially contracts wherein the trustee has properly limited his liability via qualified signature. (I will discuss the principles of and procedure for properly qualifying one's signature in a later section.). For now we will entertain the general liabilities, which may include, but are not limited to—

- Liability on all contracts made, whether signing as "trustee" or signing individually;<sup>85</sup>
- Liability of removal for breach of trust, waste, mismanagement, or good cause shown in an action for removal in a court of equity,<sup>86</sup> or according to trust instrument;
- Liability for losses sustained by the trust as a result of negligence;<sup>87</sup>
- Liability for torts and common-law criminal and civil wrongs, or acts of bad faith;<sup>88</sup>
- Liability in all cases of co-mingling of trust funds;<sup>89</sup> and
- Liability for all mischief of his agents contracted to exercise discretionary powers.<sup>90</sup>
- But, the trustee is not at all liable for any losses sustained in the proper discharge of duties,<sup>91</sup> and, in the case of other losses due to negligence or tort, the trustee may be able to be bonded in the manner ordinarily used by executors and administrators.

81 See BOYD V. U.S., supra; and SILVERTHORNE LUMBER CO. V. U.S., supra.

82 See Beach, vol. I, supra at § 19, p. 28; RICE V. HOUSTON, 80 U.S. 66 (1871); Fost. Fed. Pr. Sec. 19; and Story, Fed. Pr. Sec. 19. Also, in NEW ORLEANS V. WHITNEY, 138 U.S. 595, 34 L.Ed. 1102 (1891) the court said "[w]e have repeatedly held that representatives may stand upon their own citizenship in the federal courts irrespective of the citizenship of the persons whom they represent—as executors, administrators, guardians, trustees, receivers, [etc.]"

83 See Loring, supra at pt. II, § 1, p. 23.

84 "The contract makes the law." See, generally, Bouvier's Law Dictionary, pp. 770-790 (1928). The basic principle is that all man's law is contractual in nature, regardless of the particular classification of the law, and can acquire force only by consent: consensus facit legem.

85 See Loring, supra at pt. II, § 3, p. 65. Simply using the title "trustee" will not sufficiently limit liability in certain contracts such as debt instruments and agreements which fail to specify the non-personal capacity of the trustee. That without some express stipulation he is personally bound is well-settled law. See FELDMAN V. PRESTON, 194 Mich. 352, 160 N.W. 655; BRIED V. MINTRUP, 203 Mo.App. 567, 219 S.W. 703; HUSSEY V. ARNOLD, supra; CARR V. LEAHY, 217 Mass. 438, 105 N.E. 445; also KNIPP V. BAGBY, 126 Md. 461, 95 A. 60.

86 Any such action would have to be instituted by an interest-holder, as a last resort. And the burden of proof rests with the party bringing the action.

87 See HOLMES V. MCDONALD, 226 Ill. 169, 80 N.E. 714; and NORLING V. ALLEE, 10 N.Y.Sup. 97. But it must also be noted that this, as with all of the others can be limited. In FISHERIES CO. V. MCCOY, 202 S.W. 343 it was held that it is lawful for liability to be limited even in certain cases of tort and negligence, except where the relation of master- servant or passenger-carrier exists.

88 See Loring, supra at § 1, p. 26. However, in torts and civil wrongs, limitation of liability is amply available as per FISHERIES CO., supra. Common-law crimes are strictly of an in personam nature, going against the officer personally. <sup>89</sup>Generally, in cases of co-mingling of the trustee's personal funds with trust funds, courts will follow the trust property, unless co-mingled beyond separation, in which case the courts will treat the trust as the alter-ego of the individual acting under the assumed alias of "trustee" and will ignore the trust arrangement completely. See GREGORY V. HELVERING, 293 U.S. 465 (1935), XIV-1 C.B. 193; and HELVERING V. CLIFFORD, 309 U.S. 331 (1940). Mixing trust property with personal property is co-mingling. See PERRY ON TRUSTS, vol. I, ch. XV, § 447 (6th ed.). In many cases, however, it should be noted that, co-mingling or not, in rem jurisdiction is waived by the defendants giving way to these at-law actions; ignorance of procedural defects relating to in rem jurisdiction is the real cause.

90 See Beach, vol. II supra at ch. XXV, § 548, p. 1243; and WINTHROP V. ATT.-GEN., 128 Mass. 258.

91 Equity will always follow the law. And the trustees can never be penalized for properly discharging their duties.

Trustees are generally not liable for—

- Contracts in which liability was properly limited using the methods to be shown later. Such contracts may also encompass the codes and statutes of various jurisdictions, given that all man-made law is, by its nature, fundamentally contractual;
- The debts of the trust incurred requiring the creditor to look solely to the trust for payment.<sup>92</sup> (Conversely, the trust is not liable for the personal debts of the trustee either,<sup>93</sup> except to the extent of attachability of the trustee's interest in the trust<sup>94</sup>);
- The independent, non-preventable acts of co-trustees, of which he had no prior knowledge;<sup>95</sup>
- The acts of his agents when properly contracted;
- Taxes on income of the trust;<sup>96</sup> and
- Lawsuits against the trust.

AUTHORIZED REPRESENTATIVES

As shown above, it is well within the power, discretion, and, oftentimes, duty to contract an Authorized Representative, Managing Agent or Attorney-in-fact to deal with certain affairs of the trust. And the basic rule which courts of equity have laid down is that a trustee may contract such agents to handle all affairs which require no discretion, be they ministerial or not, and he may not delegate the essential part of a power unless, of course, he is permitted to do so by the trust instrument.<sup>97</sup>

In clarifying the discretionary power rule, it must be noted that there is no law against delegating discretionary powers to agents. The rule is simply that a trustee who does so, "does so at his own peril,"<sup>98</sup> for he is liable for all losses generated by the agent, if any. To clarify what constitutes the essential and non-essential parts of a power, the essential part is defined as the exercise of discretion, the determining of needs of the trust, or the appropriateness of an action. The unessential part is that "not requiring the exercise of discretion," etc., etc. However, there is a simple solution, allowing for greater flexibility in this rule. The solution is to "authorize the agent to contract [on behalf of the trust] subject to the assent of the trustee."<sup>99</sup> And, as noted in the previous section, if the trust instrument makes provisions for the contracting of an Authorized Representative, then the trustee cannot be liable for his acts.<sup>100</sup>

<sup>92</sup> See TAYLOR V. MAYO, 110 U.S. 330, 4 S.Ct. 147, 28 L.Ed. 163 (1884); and FROST V. THOMPSON, 219 Mass. 360, 106 N.E. 1009.

<sup>93</sup> See WRIGHT V. FRANKLIN BANK, 59 Ohio 80, 51 N.E. 876.

<sup>94</sup> See Loring, supra at pt. II, § 1, p. 41; MAVO VS. MORITZ, supra; and HUSSEY V. ARNOLD, 70 N.E. 87 (1904).

<sup>95</sup> See James Hill, supra at pt. III, div. I, ch. I, p. 309. If the acts were indeed preventable, and he had prior knowledge, then the trustee is co-liable and accountable for the loss. See also IN RE ADAMS' ESTATE, 221 Pa. 77, 70 A. 436; and IN RE COZZENS' ESTATE, 15 N.Y.Sup. 771.

<sup>96</sup> Again, the trustee must be indemnified by the trust instrument from taxation for trust gains. If the trustee holds interest in the trust, he is taxable only at the realization of an actual gain, not at the point of investment. Cf. BURNET V. LOGAN, supra; and TRENTON COTTON OIL CO. V. COMMISSIONER, supra.

<sup>97</sup> See Loring, supra at pt. II, § 2, p. 49.

<sup>98</sup> Id. at § 4, p. 74.

<sup>99</sup> Id. at § 2, pp. 48-49.

<sup>100</sup> It should be noted here that in the previous section it was shown to be a general duty of the trustee to minimize any potential risk not only to the trust, but also to himself, when contracting agents. In cases of uncertainty, the trustee may require that the agent be bonded for a certain amount which would satisfy any potential general or specific loss, assuring the trustee and trust of the good-faith performance of the agent.

Now, the method for contracting such agents may be either by formal appointment if mandated by the trust instrument, or by execution of a limited power of attorney, letter of authorization or even certificate of verbal authorization documented by minutes of meeting. The most effective, secure method of contracting such an agent would obviously be an actual appointment with a written contract setting forth the specifics of the position. But, a letter of introduction is, for most purposes, sufficient, as is a simple power of attorney when the agent is acting specifically under the title of Attorney-in-Fact.<sup>101</sup>

EXPRESS TRUST vs. CORPORATION

First, I must clarify, though I am referring primarily to corporations, included in the reference are all organizations which owe their existence to legislative acts, not limited to Limited Liability Companies, Limited Partnerships, Agencies, Associations, etc.; though not classified as corporations, they avail themselves of benefits, privileges, and franchises of the state for their very creation and existence.

Second, since we have already shown the distinct juridical personality of the trust as a legal entity,<sup>102</sup> we will not reexamine it until we consider its personality under the Roman civil law of the 14th Amendment in a later section.

But it must be noted it's well-settled law that the Express Trust is a lawful,<sup>103</sup> legal, valid business organization,<sup>104</sup> with the right to hold property and sue in its business name.<sup>105</sup> And its uses in modern business have some of their strongest roots in England, Germany and many of the United States where it has been recognized for its superiority, and even praised, by such notable authorities as the Ohio Supreme Court for its effectiveness in the business of life insurance.<sup>106</sup>

The declaration of trust has been held to be an effective substitute for incorporation, for its many advantages, which will undoubtedly shine through to the reader by the following table. I have prepared this table based upon the work by John H. Sears who, after discussing the impact of the twin landmark cases<sup>107</sup> on the grave lack of profitability of using corporations for, inter alia, dealing in real estate, went to task in outlining the distinct benefits of Express Trusts.

<sup>101</sup> I have supplied the reader with a sample multipurpose letter of introduction for opening a bank account in the sample forms section. All the reader needs to do is modify the letter to encompass the particular purpose for which the authorization may be necessary. A sample limited power of attorney is also provided in that section. I have also provided a sample Authorized Representative contract, specifying the particular authorization, power, and limitation of liability, etc., for said agent. (When used with Managing Agents, modification to the contract's language may be necessary.)

<sup>102</sup> See BRIGHAM V. U.S., supra; and BURNETT V. SMITH, supra.

<sup>103</sup> The lawfulness of the Express Trust created under the common law is obvious, however, the allegation to the contrary has often been made in the past and, occasionally, by the ignorant nowadays. Among the long list of precedents confirming its lawfulness is PALMER ET AL. V. TAYLOR ET AL., 269 S.W. 996 (1925), offered here simply to add to the collection.

<sup>104</sup> See BAKER V. STERN, A.L.R. 462; REEVES V. POWELL, 267 S.W. 328 (1924); WEEKS V. SIBLEY, 269 Fed. 155 (D.C.Tex. 1920); PHILLIPS V. BLATCHFORD, 137 Mass. 510 (1884); and BURNETT V. SMITH, supra.

<sup>105</sup> See U.S. V. CARRUTHERS, 219 F.2d 21 (C.A.9 (Or.) 1955).

<sup>106</sup> "There was no class of business, the transaction of which, as a matter of private right, was better recognized at common law than that of making contracts of insurance upon the lives of individuals." STATE V. ACKERMAN, 51 Ohio St. 163, 37 N.E. 828, 24 L.R.A. 298.

<sup>107</sup> ELIOT V. FREEMAN, supra; and MAINE BAPTIST MISSIONARY CONVENTION V. COTTING ET AL., 220 U.S. 178 (1911).

The works of William C. Dunn,<sup>108</sup> Guy A. Thompson,<sup>109</sup> and Sidney R. Wrightington<sup>110</sup> are cited as well. Mr. Sears says:<sup>111</sup>

The decision of the United States Supreme Court ... holding that the [Express] Trusts are not subject to the Federal excise tax on corporations, has emphasized this method of conducting business as compared with corporations... [T]he best legal talent was soon impressed into the service of devising a means of affording the usual advantages belonging to a corporation without the authority of any legislative act. A method of placing the property into the hands of trustees, who held the legal title and issued certificates, similar to shares of stock, to the cestui que trust, showing the interest owned by each, possessed nearly all the advantages desired. [This excluded the use of limited liability companies, joint-stock associations, and co-partnerships, which are] organized under enabling statutes which [merely] enlarge the privileges possessed at common law, and they are, therefore, subject to State regulations, which may be equally burdensome to those imposed on corporations. [Italics emphasis supplied in original; bold emphasis and bracket information added.]

108 TRUSTS FOR BUSINESS PURPOSES (1922).

109 BUSINESS TRUSTS AS SUBSTITUTES FOR BUSINESS CORPORATIONS (1920).

110 THE LAW OF UNINCORPORATED ASSOCIATIONS AND BUSINESS TRUSTS (2d ed. 1923).

111 supra at § 1, p. 3.

| EXPRESS TRUST   | CORPORATION   |
|---|---|
| Governed under equity. Trust law is the most well-settled body of law in America.  | Governed under statute. Forever changing according to political agendas and schemes.  |
| Trustee(s) are sole authority, except where delegated to Agents or a Board of Directors.  | Board of Directors are managers with limited, defined powers to conduct business, hold regular meetings, etc.   |
| Trustees afforded more leverage and powers are generally broader than corporate officers. Law provides that whatever any individual may lawfully do, the trust can do. The sky (nature) is the limit.  | Relatively broad powers, such as with holding companies. But corporations may not do whatever any individual may lawfully do; they can only do what is legal . The statute (legislature) is the limit.   |
| Trustee's liability is limited by trust instrument and by signature on all contracts and instruments. Remember Boyd and Silverthorne — trustees not subject to subpoena.   | Corporate officers are personally liable to the legislature and to creditors for all ambiguous indorsements. Remember Enron and Global Crossing —cannot escape service of process. <sup>112</sup> |
| Life-span of 20-25 years at a time in order to avoid rules against perpetuities. Death of settlor or trustee has no effect on life or affairs of trust. Succession of power is quiet and private.  | Life-span is perpetual for a certain number of years according to legislative requirements. All officer changes must be reported, which records are open for public review.                                     |
| Trust is not required to obtain business license. <sup>113</sup>   | The opposite is the case.   |
| Trustees are not required to file reports with any entity, and are accountable only to the beneficiary, governed strictly under principles of equity.   | Required to file statements and reports quarterly, etc.   |
| Business names are naturally protected by injunction. (May also use trade-name or trademark for trust purposes without registration.) <sup>114</sup>   | Must apply for and secure fictitious firm names, and must register all trade-names and trademarks.  |
| All Federal excise tax and state organization and franchise taxes are legally avoided.   | The opposite is the case, except for state taxes in certain states. In either respect, all corporations are taxed indirectly via inflation. <sup>115</sup>  |
| Not subject to foreign corporation laws of any state. Not inherently subject to commercial regulation except for “income” derived from corporate stock and physical franchises under Article I § 8 Clauses 1 and 3. Express Trust is a valid legal entity in all States of the Union. <sup>116</sup> | Inherently subject to all foreign corporation laws and public policy regulation.  |

112 Although corporate officers reserve the relative-right to plead the fifth, they have merely the relative-right to plead the congressionally interpreted “spirit” of the amendment, not the letter of the law, due to their 14th Amendment citizenship. Trustees of an Express Trust have the absolute-right to directly refuse self-incrimination as well as indirectly on a jurisdictional basis. See Lee Brobst et al., supra; BOYD V. U.S., supra; and SILVERTHORNE LUMBER CO. V. U.S., supra.

113 See PEOPLE V. ROSE, supra. Once trust is executed, it is an existing “express business,” and, unless the trust instrument requires the trustee to obtain a business license, one is not needed except for new (i.e., heretofore nonexistent) express business.

114 See PEOPLE V. ROSE, 219 Ill. 46, 76 N.E. 42; YWCA V. YWCA, 194 Ill. 194, 62 N.E. 551; MCLEAN V. FLEMING, 96 U.S. 245 (1877); LANE V. BROTHERS, ETC., 120 Ga. 355; AIELLO V. MONTECALFE, 21 R.I. 496; and RUDOLPH V. SOUTHERN BENEFICIAL LEAGUE, 23 Abbott’s N.C. 199.

115 “[I]nflation is a ‘method of taxation’ which the government uses to ‘secure the command over real resources, resources just as real as those obtained by [ordinary] taxation’. ‘What is raised by printing notes,’ ... is just as much taken from the public as is ... an income tax.’” 1980 ANNUAL REPORT, Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, p. 10, quoting John Maynard Keynes’ THE ECONOMIC CONSEQUENCES OF THE PEACE (1920).

116 See JONES V. HABERSHAM, 107 U.S. 174, 27 L.Ed. 401 (1883); FELLOWS V. MINER, 119 Mass. 541; SOHIER V. BURR, 127 Mass. 221; SEWALL V. WILMER, 132 Mass. 131; and CROSS V. U.S. TRUST CO., 131 N.Y. 330, 349, 30 N.E. 125. A trust invalid where created, but valid where to be administered will be upheld where made. HOPE V. BREWER, 136 N.Y. 126, 143, 32 N.E. 558.

|   |  |
|---|--|
| Trust may function as an Article IV § 2 citizen of United States via its trustee, not a 14th Amendment citizen. <sup>117</sup>This citizen is understood in constitutional law as the private citizen. <sup>118</sup> | Corporation is 14th Amendment citizen, <sup>119</sup> regardless of citizenship of a corporate officer. Generally state corporations require officers to be citizens as well. This citizen is inherently public due to the nature of the amendment. <sup>120</sup> |
| Trustees have absolute-rights and privileges to engage in commerce under protection of the Federal Constitution. <sup>121</sup>  | Corporate officers have relative-right and privileges to do so, and incur more taxability by doing so.   |
| Trustees issue certificates in the manner prescribed by the trust instrument. Certificate holders have no say in the administration of trust affairs.   | Must go “public” in order to issue stock. Stockholders have a relative say in affairs depending on the extent of their holdings.   |
| Interests of the beneficiary(s) well protected by equity.Power to secure information as to the actions of the trustees and trust affairs is, no doubt, superior to the rights and remedies of stockholders in corporations.  | Stockholders rights protected by courts, yet the basic statutory nature of corporations allows for abuse. Stockholders are generally at the mercy of someone.  |
| Units of interest in the trust are not personal property of the certificate holder and carry no liability as such.   | Shares of stock are personal property in hands of the owner and taxes are issued on the same property against both the owner and corporation.  |
| No legal obligation to maintain the capital and refrain from paying dividends out of capital. Trust instruments govern.  | The opposite is the case.  |
| May prosecute/defend litigation in trust or trustee name without compromising legality. Same rules as to parties and procedure at law and in equity are applicable.  | May bring and defend litigation in the corporate name and entity only. The process of piercing corporate veils succeeds mostly due to confusion of personal and official capacities by officers.   |

While the mortality rate of corporations and the like have historically remained high, Express Trusts remained, and indeed to this day, continue to remain vital.<sup>122</sup> Also, as the table shows, many of the powers of an Express Trust are substantially the same as those of a corporation in effect, but without the legislative requirement of registration in order for those powers to be activated. These advantages and more have been and are still seized by some of the shrewdest, wealthiest individuals and families in America and from abroad.

117 See FARMERS LOAN & TRUST CO. V. C. & A. RY. CO., 27 Fed. 146 (C.C.Ind. 1886); and SHIRK V. CITY OF LAFAYETTE, 52 Fed. 857 (CC.Ind. 1892). For an understanding of the profound superiority of Article IV § 2 citizenship over 14th Amendment citizenship, see Lee Brobst et al., supra.

118 See HALE V. HENKEL, supra.

119 See SANTA CLARA COUNTY V. SOUTHERN PACIFIC R. CO., supra.

120 14th Amendment citizens, under the Roman civil law (private international law/admiralty-maritime law), are inherently public, with only relative-privacy.

121 Any statute enacted by a state which prohibits this right is in conflict with the Constitution. See BRUANT V. RICHARDSON, 126 Ind. 145, 25 N.E. 807; ROBEY V. SMITH, Ind.Sup. 30 N.E. 1093; and FARMERS’ LOAN & TRUST CO., supra.

122 See Chandler, supra at p. 11. Reportedly, the oldest Express Trust in America is the North American Land Company, formed by Patrick Henry, with the aid of John Nicholson and James Greenleaf, for Robert Morris of Virginia (popularly known as the “Financier of the American Revolution,” distinguished from Virginia Colony Governor), circa 1764, roughly a decade prior to the signing of the Declaration of Independence (1776) and Mr. Henry’s compelling address to the Virginia Legislature, GIVE ME LIBERTY (1775). North American Land Company was later expanded in 1795, but was dissolved in 1798, at which time its land holdings consisted of roughly 4 million acres scattered over Georgia, the Carolinas, New York, and the states in between. See PLAN OF ASSOCIATION OF THE NORTH AMERICAN LAND COMPANY: ESTABLISHED FEBRUARY 1795 by Peter Force (1795). Another, and possibly more noteworthy, Express Trust was the Merchants Bank of New York, formed by Alexander Hamilton, circa 1810. As an aside, this Express Trust made full use of transferability of shares, i.e., certificates, and limited liability (see HAMILTON’S WORKS, Congressional ed., VII, 838), whereas Mr. Morris ultimately served time in debtors prison after the trust revenues from installment sales and share sales did not come in quickly enough to meet the loan and tax deadlines. George Washington is reported to have had many a dinner in debtors prison with Mr. Morris, where he visited him frequently; the two were good friends.

But the widely perceived, yet untraceable, wealth of such individuals and families like the Rothchilds, Rockerfellers, Kennedys, Forbes, and many of the American founding fathers, plus countless modern day politicians, are strong circumstantial evidence of this. One may find many articles and information, as well as quotes,<sup>123</sup> attesting to this.

Lastly, it should be mentioned that, unlike the corporation, there is no lawful method by which to pierce the trust without the express permission or implied consent of the trustee, or some unlawful activity on the part of the trust giving rise to a bona fide cause of action. As a result, virtually no direct evidence of the trust's existence can be found unless it is made to be found via recording— even then it can only be heard by a court of competent jurisdiction, which, as you shall see in the sections ahead, is very hard to find nowadays [and occurs in camera - meaning private proceedings with no public allowed]. This is protection at its finest, hiding in plain sight, for as the maxim goes: bene vixit, qui bene latuit.<sup>124</sup>

UNDERSTANDING COMMERCE

Here is where we begin to address the Express Trust in action. As shown above, the trust may engage in all manner of trade and commerce,<sup>125</sup> but before taking the step of doing so, the reader would greatly benefit the trust by understanding the nature of commerce in twenty-first century America. And for my brief explanation of the subtle intricacies involved, I will rely upon the two works by Lee Brobst et al.<sup>126</sup> I will not go into a detailed explanation of the constitution or the history of commerce for want of space, but I would suggest that the reader read the works relied upon herein.

When the trustee is engaging in trade or commerce in-behalf of the trust, acting under general common law, the trust is within the jurisdiction over which the literal and absolute protections of the Bill of Rights extend, and he has no direct contact with the federal government. Under right of contract law protected by the Federal Constitution, the trustee may enter into the 14th Amendment jurisdiction via contract, i.e., by willfully availing the trust of benefits like the quasi-corporate privilege/franchise of limited liability for the discharge of debts using Federal Reserve Notes, pursuant to the economic system established under former H.J. Res. 192.<sup>127</sup> (Contrast discharge with the payment of debts with standard gold-backed currency under the original Coinage Act of 1792.)

Under this jurisdiction, the federal government (Congress) has full and direct contact with the trust, “as they see fit, for the benefit of public policy regulations (known as codes & statutes) of this jurisdiction.”<sup>128</sup>

<sup>123</sup> One such quote is that of John D. Rockefeller who is reported to have said that the key to true wealth and power is to “own nothing and control everything.” Your author is confident that the reader will see the self-evidence of this truth; and the Express Trust throughout the relatively short history of America has served to facilitate this practice. A search for the assets of the Rockefeller family will prove the truth of this philosophy.

<sup>124</sup> “He lives well who conceals himself [his assets] well.” Ovid (c. 43 B.C.-A.D. 18).

<sup>125</sup> “The words ‘trade’ and ‘commerce’ are often used interchangeably; but, strictly speaking, commerce relates to intercourse or dealings with foreign nations, states, or political communities, while trade denotes business intercourse or mutual traffic within the limits of a state or nation, or the buying, selling, and exchanging of articles between members of the same community.” Black’s Law Dictionary, p. 336 (4th ed. Rev. 1968).

<sup>126</sup> supra, see footnotes 14 and 29.

<sup>127</sup> H.J. Res. 192 was tacitly repealed on October 27, 1977 as codified at 31 U.S. Code § 5118(a)(1) and (d)(2). And though gold clauses have since been upheld as legally enforceable again (see FAY CORP. V. FREDERICK & NELSON SEATTLE, INC., 896 F.2d 1227 (C.A.9 (Wash.) 1990)) it successfully put in place a system which survived the repeal, and thus today most participants make no noticeable use of the now legally enforceable gold clause. Therefore, all discussion relating to H.J. Res. 192 remains valid in the sense that nothing has changed materially since its repeal thirty years ago.

This makes the federal government a third-party intervenor in the affairs of the trust by operation of law,<sup>129</sup> because the trust (as with the 14th Amendment citizens) is being allowed to get away with not truly fulfilling its commercial contracts [usually by license] as is required under the common law of contracts. I will show how this can all be avoided in a later section.

The resulting nexus or “confederacy developed under [H.J. Res. 192] ... is an affiliation known better as an association<sup>130</sup>.” “And the ‘common enterprise’ of this unincorporated society, is to offer all Americans a so-called ‘privilege’ in the form of what is better known as a ‘[quasi-contract]’ to participate in commerce without ‘Payment of Debts’ for ‘social security’ purposes. Moreover, this unincorporated society is outside the literal common-law principle that demands the ‘Payment of [D]ebts’ as stated in Article 1 Section 10, but is allowed, upheld and protected by Article 1 Section 10 that upholds [the] ‘Obligation of Contracts.’”<sup>131</sup>

This amounts to a “federated unincorporated society by operation of law [which] is contractually protected by the Constitution [in the same way the Express Trust and its trustee(s) are].” And the trust and/or trustee reserves the right to “domicile themselves in ... the Union under Article IV Section 3 [C]lause 1, [and] thus to contract under Article I Section 10 despite the fact that [they] ... cannot ‘Pay’ [their] ... debts. In other words, Congress cannot compel [the trust or its trustee(s)] ... to participate in a federal interstate unincorporated banking association under Article IV Section 3 [C]lause 2 and [H.J. Res. 192] ... for the NON payment of debts. The choice of law is up to each person still.”<sup>132</sup>

Corporations are “artificial creations of the state or federal government under physical charter (franchise) issued via state or federal civil law for commercial regulation under Article I Section 8 [C]lauses 1 & 3. They are not under the literal common law because of the charter (franchise). Any legal action against the corporation is legally called an ‘in rem’ action, because it is against the thing or property (also called res) of the corporation under charter. The courts have automatic subject[-]matter jurisdiction, because the physical charter is the subject[-]matter.”<sup>133</sup>

“Under the letter of the constitutional law there is no commercial regulation, but [H.J. Res. 192] ... along with 15 U.S. Code brought in a third party for commercial regulation for the social security public policy.” Remember, ‘equity compels performance.’

The law views unincorporated associations as a danger to the substance of the common law, because of their debt/credit system. This is because there is no counter balance to the demands the association puts on the substance of the earth, thus the reason for all the federal and state regulatory agencies.

<sup>129</sup> The federal government’s power of regulation in this manner is fully constitutional, deriving its authority from art. I, § 8, cl. 1 and 8, being one of the general legislative powers. The relationship between congress and the 14th amendment citizen is controlled under art. IV, § 3, cl. 2 because there is no physical federal or state charter issued to regulate the relationship.

<sup>130</sup> Brobst et al., supra at pp. 7-8. An association is defined as “[a]n unincorporated society; a body of persons united and acting together without a charter, but upon the methods and forms used by incorporated bodies for the prosecution of some common enterprise.” Black’s Law Dictionary, p. 156 (4th ed. Rev. 1968).

<sup>131</sup> Brobst et al., Id.

<sup>132</sup> Id.

<sup>133</sup> Id. at p. 9.

In other words, there is a presumption by implication in the civil law that a charter (a metaphysical/abstract/unreal type) exists, because persons are availing themselves (volunteering) of the privileges pertaining to [H.J. Res. 192]. Therefore, these persons come under a ‘quasi in rem’ jurisdiction of the civil law in order to regulate, control (including compel) those that are outside the literal common[-]law principles.”<sup>134</sup> The many participants under this system, especially the 14th Amendment citizens from each state, together form an unincorporated federation of state associations operating under interstate commerce as addressed in Article IV § 3 cl. 2, and reinforced by the landmark Erie R. Co. v. Tompkins<sup>135</sup> decision. This is the basis for the federal (and state) government’s compulsion of persons to its private international law (i.e., the spirit, not the letter, of the common law mixed with public Roman civil law, under Law of Nations per Article I § 8 cls. 3 and 10, and Article VI cl. 2) nowadays commonly known as codes and statutes (state or federal), to regulate everything as a matter of commerce.<sup>136</sup>

Without getting into the history of religion, and speaking purely from an analytical perspective, the Roman civil law, as a base-model for commerce regulation, was developed out of necessity of the church to avoid political scrutiny for its handling of ever increasing amounts of precious metals. It had become a “‘storehouse’ for the money and property the people were persuaded to give in exchange for limited liability — go directly to heaven instead of hell. As the people became more educated and saw what was really behind the power of religion [in generating wealth], the Roman Church fell under greater and greater criticism. This led to the development of a banking system to handle and control church wealth and take the critical focus [away from the church.]”<sup>137</sup>

“The bank learned from the church about limited liability. If you could get people to borrow money beyond their ability to pay back, you could get them to keep performing [paying interest in one form or another] on a debt (liability) without ever demanding it [the principal] back, thereby, loaning out that same credit to more than one individual or company. This meant that the bank was limiting the liability of the borrower so he was not fully responsible for the debt as long as he continued to perform to paying the interest. This way real money (gold) became credit (paper money) by loaning to more than one person. Being involved in this sort of commerce was called ‘private commerce.’ With the church’s control over wealth, this private commerce became standard practice in world trade upon the sea — private international or admiralty/maritime law became known as Roman civil law as it began to figure heavily in the politics of every city and country it touched through international commerce.”<sup>138</sup>

By operation of this body of law, particularly its in rem element, all persons subject to its jurisdiction are not necessarily regarded as fictional “vessels” per say, but are more so as objects of the State, discussed earlier (see footnote 24).

<sup>134</sup> Id. at pp. 9-10.

<sup>135</sup> 304 U.S. 64 (1938).

<sup>136</sup> This can be better understood from PROPELLER GENESEE CHIEF V. FITZHUGH, 53 U.S. 443, 451-453 (1851), wherein the court said that, within the letter of the constitution, “[t]he law contains no regulations of commerce... It merely confers a new jurisdiction on the district courts; and this is its only object and purpose... It is evident ... that Congress, in passing [the law], did not intend to exercise their power to regulate commerce... The statutes do no more than grant jurisdiction over a particular class of cases... Now the judicial power in cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, has never been supposed to extend to contracts made on land and to be executed on land. But if the power of regulating commerce can be made the foundation of jurisdiction in its courts, and a new and extended admiralty jurisdiction beyond its heretofore known and admitted limits, may be created on water under that authority, the same reason would justify the same exercise of power on land.”; see also VERLINDEN V. BANK OF NIGERIA, 461 U.S. 496 (1983). Roman civil law is also why the I.R.S. continually refers to income taxes as voluntary although, to the ignorant, it appears to be the exact opposite.

<sup>137</sup> U.S.A. THE REPUBLIC, IS THE HOUSE THAT NO ONE LIVES IN, p. 9.

<sup>138</sup> Id.

These objects, like vessels in traditional Admiralty practice, are vested with a distinct quasi-corporate, juridical personality, but, unlike vessels, are capable of suing and being sued in personam.<sup>139</sup> 14th Amendment citizens of the United States, whether state or federal chartered corporations or metaphysical-chartered corporate-colored public persons, therefore, are akin to public vessels of the United States within the broad meaning of the Public Vessels Act [admiralty law], and are regulated accordingly. The United States, as with the Roman Church, is considered in international law as a “ship of state”. The Express Trust, then, is akin to a private vessel of the united states of America, navigating through the often hostile waters called interstate commerce (which is international commerce via the United States treaties).

DOING BUSINESS

Even though the Express Trust is technically not a “business trust”<sup>140</sup> within the established meaning of the term, this in no way prevents or inhibits the trust from engaging in all manner of business the trustee is permitted to under declaration, and it need only obtain the franchise of a business license if it anticipates doing express business in the above-described jurisdiction.<sup>141</sup> The trust may operate a business, acquire a business, sell or otherwise dispose of its business, or even contract under the limited liability system and become a taxable entity—the choice is yours. The only thing which may bar the trust from conducting a particular kind of business in any certain jurisdiction is the public policy of that jurisdiction, regarding which, it has been admitted, most states have not passed upon the subject directly.<sup>142</sup> Regardless of the nature of the business, there is a due notice rule which confers a duty upon the trustee under equity. The rule consists of two parts:

The first is that he should sufficiently distinguish and represent the nature of the trust to the party with whom he is doing business. It is of the utmost importance, in the forming of business contracts, that full disclosure be made—on all letterheads, business cards, checks, bills and order blanks, papers, etc.—so as to prevent any claims of lack of disclosure from arising in the future. But prudence dictates that a trustee must not disclose every fact regarding the trust, its declaration, and its affairs. The first part of the due notice requirement can be sufficiently accomplished simply by employing the designations “Irrevocable Express Trust Organization,” “Express Trust Organization,” “Trust Organization,” or “Organized under Declaration of Trust,” beneath or next to the trust’s name.

<sup>139</sup> See THE CHINA, 74 U.S. 53 (1868); and THE BARNSTABLE, 181 U.S. 464 (1901).

<sup>140</sup> PENNSYLVANIA CO. V. U.S., supra.

<sup>141</sup> See PEOPLE V. ROSE, supra.

<sup>142</sup> No state has ever made any attempt to prohibit Express Trusts (i.e., impair the contract rights of persons sui juris). However, many states have attempted successfully to prohibit “associations,” the most notable being the Ohio Attorney General in STATE V. ACKERMAN (supra), against C.F. Ackerman and ninety-nine other persons who were transacting business of guarantee and accident insurance in the state under the name of the Guarantee and Accident Lloyds, New York. The Attorney General alleged that they were doing business without having complied with the laws of the state or receiving proper authority from the state to do business of that kind. The court found that because the defendants were acting under mere association (as opposed to under declaration of trust), they were an association unlawfully exercising a franchise within the state, acting as a corporation therein without being legally incorporated. The court indirectly affirmed the well-understood principle scarcely in need of restatement that Express Trusts may engage in any manner of business allowed to individuals as a natural right. In fact, to restate this principle over and over again would be “ostentatious.” CHISHOLM V. GEORGIA, 2 U.S. 419, 453 (1793).

As public policy is a form of regulation, it should be noted the case of MUNN V. ILLINOIS, 94 U.S. 113, 126 (1876) in which the court expounded on the principle of regulation. Because the trust is of private property, and its business is private as well, the trust business is not “affected with a public interest.” It does not become affected with a public interest until the trustee participates in behalf of the trust in the unincorporated interstate banking association, obtains a business license or other franchise, contracts under it, or conducts the private business of the trust in a “manner to make it of public consequence, and affect the [14th Amendment] community at large. When, therefore, one devotes his property to a use in which the public has an interest, he, in effect, grants to the public an interest in that use and must submit to be controlled by the public [policy] ... to the extent of the interest he has thus created. He may withdraw his grant by discontinuing the use; but, so long as he maintains the use, he must submit to the control.”

It must not be excessively revealing about the trust (the trustee has a duty to protect the privacy of the trust), but it also must not be misleading (the trustee has a duty to not compromise the integrity of the trust). He is in no way prohibited from exercising the utmost shrewdness.<sup>143</sup> The second part is that he should stipulate in plain and certain language, in all written contracts and obligations that the trust only is liable for its obligations and that neither the trustee nor interest-holders are to be held to any personal liability in the contract.<sup>144</sup> He may also wish to cite the provision of the trust which so limits his and/or the interest-holders' liability, but this is often unnecessary. And the trustee should always designate his title either under or immediately next to his name and signature.<sup>145</sup>

The trustee should obtain a mailing address for the trust, and though he is the principal and holder of the trust property, it is generally prudent to refrain from mixing the trust's affairs with his own. He should also obtain all separate business necessities (telephone service, utilities, etc.) for the trust. Logic follows that he should do these things regardless of whether he is operating a trust business or not. He should, for all intents and purposes, maintain a strict separation of the trust's identity from his own. The trust may use a personal home address to begin, but should be moved when possible.

LIMITING LIABILITY & RISK

In all contracts, as we have already noted, though it is best to always apply it, the trustee's mere designation of title is not sufficient to limit his liability or remove the risks to his own individual assets. Instead, he must employ the proper language either within the terms of the contract or above or beneath his signature, or in any proper place where it will appear unambiguously, indicating something to the effect of—

- “The property and funds of the Trust Organization only are liable for contract obligations, individual Trustee(s) or interest-holders are not personally liable”;
- “John W. Doe, acting as Trustee under the Declaration of Trust dated October 1, 2005, establishing the Trust Organization therein called ABC Trust and not individually”;
- “John Doe as Trustee and not personally”;
- “As Trustee but not personally”; or
- “Without Recourse to Trustee”.

Any form of words that will convey in certain, unmistakable language to the other party that he is dealing with an Express Trust is sufficient notice under the rule; whether it is necessary to also cite the provision of the trust instrument which limits his liability is a decision left to the discretion of the trustee.

<sup>143</sup> See McCoy, supra at p. 1.

<sup>144</sup> Id.

<sup>145</sup> It has been suggested that whether the trustee designates his title or not, he is in-fact acting as trustee, because the substance not the form is what controls. However, for security purposes, I would argue that the designation should be applied in all situations, regardless. Doing so will avoid any superficial confusion.

To quote Mr. Justice Woods in the case of Taylor v. Mayo:<sup>146</sup> “If a trustee contracting for the benefit of a trust wants to protect himself from individual liability on the contract, he must stipulate that he is not to be personally responsible, but that the other party is to look solely to the trust estate.” And in the case of Shoe and Leather National Bank v. Dix:<sup>147</sup> the court held, with regard to the promissory note made by the trustees under such limited liability, that it was not within the power of the court to change the trust liability on the note into a personal one of the trustees; that liability on a contract must be determined by the terms of the contract itself; and that a contract entered into under such limited liability (be it a note, agreement, etc.) cannot be converted into one under personal liability by law. To do so would be to alter the terms of the contract itself. (Furthermore, any such stipulation is ultimately subject to the acceptance of the other party in order to gain validity in the contract.)

BANKING

The Trustee may open any business checking account, financial account, trust account, etc., which he is authorized by declaration to open, but he must keep in mind that by doing so, the trust will be participating directly in that unincorporated interstate banking association with all its limited-liability consequences described above. There is only one type of account that avoids those consequences: the non-interest bearing checking account. When utilized in conjunction with the following banking practices, the trust and the trustee will remain out of the tentacles of public policy. Unless the trustee intends to play within the system, the trustee should—

- Never contract for any credit cards, and if the trust has already obtained them, rescind and cancel the contracts;
- Open a non-interest bearing checking account in order to avoid the “privileges and immunities” associated with interest;<sup>148</sup>
- Maintain the minimum required balance at all times if possible and unless specific transactions demand otherwise;
- When transacting business, use that bank account solely for depositing the checks and keeping track of the trust funds;
- Never send or allow trust checks to be sent across state lines;
- Instead of writing checks, use postal money orders or the bank’s corporate certified checks or corporate money orders when sending interstate payments; and
- Use a bonded or non-bonded agent to establish the account on behalf of the trustee.

When opening the bank account (non-interest bearing as well as any other), the following must be provided—

1. The original, notarized Letter of Authorization (or letter of introduction or a limited power of attorney) if being opened by an Authorized Representative;<sup>149</sup>

<sup>146</sup> supra. See also MITCHELL V. WHITLOCK, 121 N.C. 166, 28 S.E. 292.

<sup>147</sup> 123 Mass. 148, 25 Am.Rep. 49.

<sup>148</sup> It should be noted that proof of the operation of law in the manner described in the preceding sections is that banks are not required to obtain a social or tax identification number, and may accept any kind of identification information they wish— only when opening non-interest bearing accounts.

<sup>149</sup> The agent should set up a date with the bank for the trustee to come in and sign the bank card and give identification. The trustee should sign as trustee under limitation of liability.

2. A copy of the Certificate of Trust;
3. A copy of the Trustee Appointment;
4. A copy of the settlor’s/grantor’s acknowledgment of trust or Letter of Introduction (introducing the trustee). There are usually two introduction or acknowledgment documents per trustee: one regarding his fiduciary powers specifically addressed to banking institutions and one regarding his general power to establish all other accounts;

5. *A copy of the first and signature pages of the declaration of trust. Note: The bank will almost always require evidence of a trust agreement, but the other documents may be sufficient depending on who you are dealing with. If you can open the account without providing these documents, or with providing only a few of the documents, great. Again, this is a non-interest bearing checking account, so scrutiny is not a priority. Accounts such as this have been downplayed by banks via advertised interest rates, so most people would rather open accounts that appear to have the prospect of interest earnings; and
6. Only if necessary to obtain an EIN, a copy of the filed IRS Form SS-4.

Take into account the state of ignorance of the law which prevails in America today. Give only the information needed to open the account, but do not arouse suspicion or fear from lack of understanding on the part of bank employees. If you are able to befriend someone in the institution who can establish the account more flexibly, then do it. You must be shrewd in your methods for establishing the account, since, regardless of which bank you choose, you will be dealing with trained employees who, usually, are just a few screws and bolts away from being robots. You should consult the business tactics of successful negotiators who will all attest that the individual who needs the service is at the mercy of the provider, but the individual whose confidence and attitude subtly convey that his business is in high demand is given services, gifts, perks, not to mention any kind of account— just to get his business. It is not my intention to state the obvious, for in all business dealings, which a bank account is, one must be persuasive to get the desired results. And don't be hesitant to shop around— negotiate— bend perception—create competition.

In the event it becomes unavoidably necessary to the opening of a non-interest bearing account or if the trustee does see fit to obtain an interest bearing or other financial account, then he (or an agent) must apply to the IRS for an Employer Identification Number (EIN) for banking purposes. This may be done in one of the following ways:

- Instantly, via telephone from 7:00 a.m. – 7:00 p.m. (EST Mon-Fri) by calling the Business Tax Line at (215) 516-6999;
- International applicants must call (267) 941-1099 (Not a toll-free number)
- Instantly, online by going to <http://www.irs.gov/>, clicking “apply online,” then “APPLY ONLINE NOW,” and filling out the online Form SS-4 Application for Employer Identification Number, and proceeding through the prompts. (Be sure to print all the pages for the trust's records); or
- By performing the same steps above, but after clicking “apply online,” click “How to Apply for an EIN,” then “Form SS-4,” and fill it out, print it, then either:
  - Send it via mail or carrier to the proper regional office or else the one designated for “entities with no legal residence, principal place of business, or principal office or agency in any state”:
    - Attn: EIN Operation
    - Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19255; or
  - Fax it to Fax-TIN at (215) 516-1040.

The form should be filled out according to the specifications of the trust. I have provided an example of how it has been filled out without a problem. It should be noted that due to recent changes in the online application, you may find it more advantageous to apply via any method other than online, e.g., via fax. The new changes make it contractually impossible to apply for an EIN strictly for the purpose of opening a bank account. In fact, with the new online form, the applicant is forced to misrepresent the nature of the trust as non-statutory, which automatically imports the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code applicable to Federal taxable entities.

With both telephone and online applications, the trust will immediately be given a temporary EIN until the hard-copy application, which will be sent to the trust address for completion and indorsement, has been returned to that office within 15 days of the original online application. The EIN is valid 24 hours from the moment the voice or electronic application is submitted, but if the hard-copy application is not returned within 15 days, the temporary EIN will expire and cannot be used. In fact, it is not permanently registered into the Federal Tax ID database until the hard-copy has been processed.

With faxed applications, the trust will be given a temporary EIN by fax within 4 business days, which will become permanent once the hard-copy application is sent in via mail or carrier. And, with mailed in applications, the application is processed upon receipt, and an EIN is issued via the mail within 2 weeks. The other EIN application offices based on region can be found at the address given above by clicking “Where to File” in the side menu located in the left margin of the web page.

|  |   |   |     |                   |
|--|---|---|-----|-------------------|
| Form SS-4(Rev. December 2001)Department of the TreasuryInternal Revenue Service | Application for Employer Identification Number(For use by employers, corporations, partnerships, trusts, estates, churches, government agencies, Indian tribal entities, certain individuals, and others.)▶ See separate instructions for each line. ▶ Keep a copy for your records. | <table border="1" style="width: 100%; border-collapse: collapse;"> <tr> <td style="text-align: center;">EIN</td> </tr> <tr> <td style="text-align: center;">OMB No. 1545-0003</td> </tr> </table> | EIN | OMB No. 1545-0003 |
| EIN  |   |   |     |                   |
| OMB No. 1545-0003  |   |   |     |                   |

|   |  |   |
|---|--|---|
| Type or print clearly.  | 1 Legal name of entity (or individual) for whom the EIN is being requestedABC123 Training Group   |   |
|   | 2 Trade name of business (if different from name on line 1)  | 3 Executor, trustee, "care of" nameJohn W. Doe, Trustee          |
|   | 4a Mailing address (room, apt., suite no. and street, or P.O. box)c/o 1234 N. Number Street, #567   | 5a Street address (if different) (Do not enter a P.O. box.)                 |
|   | 4b City, state, and ZIP codeCleveland, Ohio 98765   | 5b City, state, and ZIP code  |
|   | 6 County and state where principal business is located   |   |
|   | 7a Name of principal officer, general partner, grantor, owner, or trustorn/a  | 7b SSN, ITIN, or EINn/a  |
|   | 8a Type of entity (check only one box)   |   |
|   |   <input type="checkbox"/> Sole proprietor (SSN) _____ <input type="checkbox"/> Partnership <input type="checkbox"/> Corporation (enter form number to be filed) ▶ _____ <input type="checkbox"/> Personal service corp. <input type="checkbox"/> Church or church-controlled organization <input type="checkbox"/> Other nonprofit organization (specify) ▶ _____ <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Other (specify) ▶ Trust Organization   <input type="checkbox"/> Estate (SSN of decedent) _____ <input type="checkbox"/> Plan administrator (SSN) _____ <input type="checkbox"/> Trust (SSN of grantor) _____ <input type="checkbox"/> National Guard <input type="checkbox"/> State/local government <input type="checkbox"/> Farmers' cooperative <input type="checkbox"/> Federal government/military <input type="checkbox"/> REMIC <input type="checkbox"/> Indian tribal governments/enterprises           Group Exemption Number (GEN) ▶ _____           |   |
| 8b If a corporation, name the state or foreign country (if applicable) where incorporated   | State _____ Foreign country _____  |   |
| 9 Reason for applying (check only one box)  |  |   |
|   <input type="checkbox"/> Started new business (specify type) ▶ _____ <input type="checkbox"/> Hired employees (Check the box and see line 12.) <input type="checkbox"/> Compliance with IRS withholding regulations <input type="checkbox"/> Other (specify) ▶ _____           <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Banking purpose (specify purpose) ▶ to open a bank account <input type="checkbox"/> Changed type of organization (specify new type) ▶ _____ <input type="checkbox"/> Purchased going business <input type="checkbox"/> Created a trust (specify type) ▶ _____ <input type="checkbox"/> Created a pension plan (specify type) ▶ _____             |  |   |
| 10 Date business started or acquired (month, day, year)   | 11 Closing month of accounting year  |   |
| 12 First date wages or annuities were paid or will be paid (month, day, year). Note: If applicant is a withholding agent, enter date income will first be paid to nonresident alien. (month, day, year) . . . . . ▶  |  |   |
| 13 Highest number of employees expected in the next 12 months. Note: If the applicant does not expect to have any employees during the period, enter "-0-" . . . . . ▶   |  |   |
| 14 Check one box that best describes the principal activity of your business.  |  |   |
|   <input type="checkbox"/> Construction <input type="checkbox"/> Rental &amp; leasing <input type="checkbox"/> Transportation &amp; warehousing <input type="checkbox"/> Real estate <input type="checkbox"/> Manufacturing <input type="checkbox"/> Finance &amp; insurance           <input type="checkbox"/> Health care &amp; social assistance <input type="checkbox"/> Wholesale-agent/broker <input type="checkbox"/> Accommodation &amp; food service <input type="checkbox"/> Wholesale-other <input type="checkbox"/> Retail <input type="checkbox"/> Other (specify) _____           <input type="checkbox"/> Wholesale-agent/broker <input type="checkbox"/> Wholesale-other <input type="checkbox"/> Retail <input type="checkbox"/> Other (specify) _____           |  |   |
| 15 Indicate principal line of merchandise sold; specific construction work done; products produced; or services provided.   |  |   |
| 16a Has the applicant ever applied for an employer identification number for this or any other business? . . . . . <input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input checked="" type="checkbox"/> NoNote: If "Yes," please complete lines 16b and 16c.   |  |   |
| 16b If you checked "Yes" on line 16a, give applicant's legal name and trade name shown on prior application if different from line 1 or 2 above.Legal name ▶ _____ Trade name ▶ _____   |  |   |
| 16c Approximate date when, and city and state where, the application was filed. Enter previous employer identification number if known.Approximate date when filed (mo., day, year) _____ City and state where filed _____ Previous EIN _____   |  |   |
| Third Party Designee  | Complete this section only if you want to authorize the named individual to receive the entity's EIN and answer questions about the completion of this form.  |   |
|   | Designee's nameJim A. Dean, Authorized Representative   |   |
|   | Designee's telephone number (include area code)( 123 ) 456-7890   |   |
|   | Designee's fax number (include area code)( 098 ) 765-4321   |   |
| Under penalties of perjury, I declare that I have examined this application, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, it is true, correct, and complete.   |  |   |
| Name and title (type or print clearly) ▶ _____  |  | Applicant's telephone number (include area code)( 123 ) 456-7890 |
| Signature ▶ _____ Date ▶ _____  |  | Applicant's fax number (include area code)( 098 ) 765-4321       |

For Privacy Act and Paperwork Reduction Act Notice, see separate instructions.

Cat. No. 16055N

Form SS-4 (Rev. 12-2001)

TRANSFERRING ASSETS

There are three principal ways to transfer assets into the trust. It may be done via a buy (in precious metals), purchase (in negotiable instruments, like FRNs that incur taxable event) or exchange (based on barter). How it is done in any given situation makes all the difference, and there are certain guidelines to follow to insure that the transfer cannot be nullified and voided.

As a general rule, the trustee, as owner of legal title to the trust property, cannot buy or purchase the trust property for himself, nor convert it to his own use contrary to the trust instrument. This is generally regardless of whether the property was bought or purchased at a public, private or judicial sale, instituted by him,<sup>150</sup> for he has the unfair advantage, and any such sale, absent certain conditions, is deemed voidable ab initio, to be set aside at the option of the beneficiary(s). The only way the property may be obtained is where it can be shown that the interest-holder assented intelligently, willfully, and without undue influence arising from the trust relationship.<sup>151</sup>

In order to sustain a sale of trust property by the trustee to himself individually (on the ground that the interest-holder assented thereto) the evidence must show the good faith of the transaction, the adequacy of the consideration, a full knowledge of the facts, and an independent consent on the part of the interest-holder.<sup>152</sup> He may, of course, buy, purchase or exchange trust property in the discharge of his duty to protect the trust.<sup>153</sup> These same principles apply to the selling of the trustee's individual property to the trust, as well as to any barter-exchange between trustee and trust. (In the case of barter-exchange there is an additional option which the trust provides, though it is usually not advisable to exercise it.) Simply put, if the contract of transfer is evidently "fair and reasonable, untainted by fraud and undue influence,.... conveyance of... property will be upheld."<sup>154</sup>

The contract of transfer need not be a complex document, so long as key principles of equity, the "guidelines,"<sup>155</sup> are strictly followed; this requires that all necessary warranties be made in the documents themselves in order to legitimize the deal. (I have provided a sample bill of sale and asset sale agreement in the sample forms section.) The general guidelines are that—

- The seller intends that the buyer shall buy, and the buyer intends that the seller shall sell, or both parties intend to effect a purchase, or that each knowingly intend to exchange one item for the other;
- The party, especially if trustee, discloses to the trust before the contract is made every fact he has learned in his fiduciary relation which is material to the sale, purchase or exchange;
- The party, especially if trustee, exercises the utmost good faith in the transaction;
- No advantage is taken by misrepresentation, concealment of or omission to disclose important information gained as trustee (or agent); and
- The entire transaction is fair and open on its face.

<sup>150</sup> Since the trustee's advantage comes by virtue of his office, it has been ruled that he may lawfully buy trust property at a sale caused by a third party, in which he has no part in procuring and over which he can exercise no control. See STEINBECK V. BON HOMME MINING CO., 152 Fed. 333 (C.C.A.8 (Colo.) 1907).

<sup>151</sup> See SWIFT V. CRAIGHEAD, 75 N.J.Eq. 102, 75 A. 974.

<sup>152</sup> See CLAY V. THOMAS, 178 Ky. 199, 198 S.W. 762; and FRENCH V. FRENCH, 58 Ind.App. 621, 108 N.E. 786.

<sup>153</sup> See HARDWICKE V. WURMSER, 180 S.W. 455. He may also apply to a court of equity, showing good cause, to obtain a decree for his purchasing of the property for protection purposes, if necessary.

<sup>154</sup> Dunn, supra at ch. IV, § 44, p. 78.

<sup>155</sup> Per BYRNE V. JONES, 159 Fed. 321 (C.C.A.8 (Ark.) 1908).

Aside from the general guidelines, there are some specific recommendations for transacting in, as well as purchasing, precious metals for common-law purposes—

- Understand your objective in terms of trusteeship. Contrary to conventional teaching, precious metals are true money, not investments. So, although there may be price appreciation, your primary objective (for purchasing metals) should be wealth preservation, i.e., preservation of the trust corpus, not necessarily profiteering, even though a significant profit may likely result to the benefit of the interest-holders;
- Know the size & grade of the coins. The size and grade are critical factors. Size determines how much precious metal you're getting. Grade determines the relative value within the size of the coin;
- Acquire only low-grade old American gold (graded AU or lower). The best form of gold holding is a low-grade old American coin in lightly circulated condition (1850- 1933). This gold is historically exempt from U.S. gold confiscation laws. Avoid extremely high coin premiums such as CU, BU, MS-61 through MS-64 and above; low-end coin not only protects the corpus' value, as well as its purchasing power (credit) but is highly liquid (marketable). Always purchase common date coins, not date-specific ones with various mint marks;
- Pay attention to delivery time. In a normal financial environment, two weeks should be the maximum time needed to complete the transaction and delivery of the metal. In an economic crisis however, demand often exceeds supply, which will alter delivery times significantly and unpredictably;
- Don't acquire rare gold coins (graded MS-64 or higher). These coins are not suitable for corpus preservation or common-law purposes in general. They are investment-grade which focus on quality plus rareness of date and mint mark, and are less liquid as a result. Moreover, due to the small market they appeal to (i.e., collectors), it is often difficult to establish fair market values, which tends to give leverage to dishonorable coin merchants;
- Let the buyer beware. Test the merchant and be sure he does not grade his own coins in-house. Ask his recommendation; if he offers bullion without warning of U.S. confiscation laws, old foreign gold, high MS coin, a gold IRA or sells in the name of a religion... beware. Also, you should never place a large order without a reliable third- party recommendation in general. At common law, diligence is the responsibility of the party who stands to lose by the lack thereof;
- Don't convert all trust cash into metals. It is generally recommended that you limit the trust's precious metals holdings to between 10-50% of the total net worth of its corpus. If, however, you deem appropriate, it may prove highly advantageous in the near future to convert up to 80% of its total fund holdings. As a trustee, it is prudent to keep enough currency for regular expenses, so as not to force yourself to have to liquidate the corpus in order to raise cash for trust expenses. The objective is to only keep as much cash as the trust can suffer to lose in an economic crisis;
- Acquire gold for corpus preservation & silver for barter. It is recommended that 90% of the trust's metals be in gold because that is its core of wealth and store of value. Gold will be too valuable per ounce for small trade, and therefore should be reserved for big-ticket transactions only. The remaining 10% of holdings should be in silver for general barter and trade purposes. The silver should be American pre-1964 dated coin; and
- Always take direct possession of the metal. Unless dealing trust-to-trust within the arrangement you command, never take a paper receipt and allow the seller to hold the metals for safekeeping. Possession is nine-tenths of the law, and anything less defeats the purpose behind acquiring the metals in the first place. When transacting trust-to-trust (or trustee-to-trust) within the arrangement however, only then is it effective to utilize negotiable instruments such as notes, bonds and drafts issued and drawn against the value of the corpus. This practice keeps in rem jurisdiction, i.e., control over the metals with the trustee and allows for greater flexibility in using the trust's credit and worth.

What's more, there is an additional method by which assets may be transferred. This is by way of assignment— either of trustee compensation, venture proceeds or profits, or even the trustee's separate employment wages/salary to the trust as value consideration in the contract of transfer. Whatever the object assigned, that the value consideration shall be in the form of an assignment should be set forth as an express term or provision in the documents evidencing the transfer.<sup>156</sup>

A trustee may issue a negotiable instrument, such as a promissory note or bond, to the trust, dividing his personal labor into shares of interest in his trustee compensation, wages, salary, etc., and assigning it to the trust in order to complete the contract. To do this, in addition to the note or bond, he must execute a formal assignment, and then give his employer, payor, etc. notice and instructions to send the payment instrument (e.g., employment check, money order, bills, etc.) to the trust, which is entitled to indorse the instrument with an authorized signature in the name of the individual trustee per the assignment. It may otherwise be agreed that the trustee shall accept the payment personally, then deliver and sign over the instrument to the trust via a special indorsement of the same. The assignment is akin to a private (quasi) garnishment, in which the employer, payor, etc., is noticed and instructed to send the payment(s) directly to the trust, or deposit the funds directly in the trust's account per the assignment; however, a garnishment proceeding is generally given precedence over voluntary assignments. (Sample assignment and notice of assignment forms are provided in the sample forms section.)

ISSUING CERTIFICATES & BONDS

As discussed in the earlier section, the trustees may issue certificates of beneficial or capital interest, or other obligations to any person they choose.<sup>157</sup> There are a total of 100 units of beneficial interest, and a separate 100 units of capital interest in the trust. The trustees determine the number of units (percentage of total interest) to be held by any one interest-holder, and may issue the full 100 units (100%) of either interest to a single individual. To issue a certificate of either interest, the trustees must act jointly as the Board of Trustees, unless there is only one trustee for the trust. They should execute under seal,<sup>158</sup> then deliver to the interest-holder(s), the actual certificate(s) evidencing the interest held. The Board should also record minutes of the meeting(s) in which it was resolved to issue the interest, and then record the act along with the interest-holders' identification information in the appropriate schedule.

<sup>156</sup> It should be noted that such an assignment can be done without any contract of transfer, rendering the object of assignment a gift. But, given the trustee's position, this is generally looked upon with great suspicion simply because of the absence of apparent value consideration for the trustee (the trustee would have to show that he gifted the thing in the spirit of charity and a warm heart, for instance). It gives the superficial appearance that the actual, ulterior motive was to avoid the liability of registered ownership, yet retain full and total ownership-in-fact, using the trust as a device to accomplish this. The property transfer must be a bona fide transfer on its face.

<sup>157</sup> It should be noted that a beneficial interest-holder, having such an interest in the trust property, has an inherent right to insist, in proper proceedings, that the trust be maintained and executed according to the terms of the trust instrument. At law, the trustees are considered the owners of the trust property, yet, in equity, the beneficial interest- holders are the absolute owners, hence their power to apply for the voiding of a voidable transaction or transfer of property as mentioned in the preceding section. See HILL V. HILL, 152 P. 1122; EX PARTE JONES, 186 Ala. 567, 64 So. 960; and COX V. COX, 95 Va. 173, 27 S.E. 834. And a beneficiary may apply to the court of equity to enforce their rights. See BINGHAM V. GRAHAM, 220 S.W. 105.

<sup>158</sup> All certificates and official documents should be executed under seal. The sealing of an instrument is prima facie evidence that it has been duly executed. See JOHNSON V. CRAWLEY, supra; and MULLANPHY V. SCHOTT, supra.

With certificates of capital interest the method is much different, though the procedure is the same as that for the trust certificates. Capital certificates work based upon barter-exchange with investors called Exchangers, who may be anyone the Board of Trustees wishes to barter with. The Board of Trustees determines the number of units to issue in exchange for the property proposed for investment into the trust. This is a pure barter between the parties, and whatever number of units is agreed stands as the full value in exchange for the proposed property.<sup>159</sup> The exchanger should present a written proposal

(an example of which is provided in the sample forms section) to the Board of Trustees. Any negotiations which take place should be recorded in the minutes in which it is resolved to either issue the interest or refuse the proposal. If the Board of Trustees has resolved to issue the interest and make the exchange, the certificate(s) must be executed and delivered to the interest-holder(s), and the property(ies) in exchange must be delivered by the interest-holder(s) to the Board of Trustees.

The final act should be recorded along with the interest-holders' information, and the property inventoried, in their respective schedules. With bonds, because a bond is merely an obligation or promise to pay money or to do some act upon the occurrence of certain circumstances, the trust need only issue the bond according to the particular transaction, e.g., to back the performance of a particular contract, to raise capital from outside investors in the form of "IOU's," etc. The distinguishing feature of a bond is that the document shows an obligation to pay some fixed amount of money or services, at a definite time, with stated interest. (I have provided some samples for various uses in the sample forms section.)

Now, there is no rule against a trustee (or agent) of the trust, exchanging his individual property for capital interest in the trust. And there is no rule against the trustee (or agent) holding beneficial interest either, though the holding of beneficial interest is generally regarded with greater suspicion than capital interest. The actual rule is that either transaction will be sustained as non-voidable if it clearly appears free of fraud, concealment, or undue advantage.<sup>160</sup> This means, any omission by the trustee (or agent) to disclose any material fact of the deal which is learned by the trustee by virtue of his office, and any misrepresentation, concealment, or other disregard of condition renders the issuance, exchange, and contract voidable at the option of the beneficial interest-holder(s). And one can wager that any accusation of invalidity of the trust by an outside party will be made on those grounds as well.

This suspicion, however unreasonable without regard to the particular merits of the situation, stems from the many Express Trusts successfully dismantled based upon the unscrupulous and often foolish failing of the Control Test. In fact, the Express Trust graveyard is mostly populated with the dead corpses of trusts who died from this very mistake. When a trustee holds all or a majority of interest (beneficial or capital) in the trust, he is, in effect, an interest-holder exercising control over the affairs and res of the trust. He derives the sole benefit of his actions, and determines the actions which would cause him to derive that sole benefit. He is owner of the legal title to the trust property as trustee, as well as owner of the equitable title to the property as interest-holder. At best, the trust is his alter-ego, hence he may be proceeded against as though the trust does not even exist. This is why it is recommended that any transfers between trustee (or agent) and the trust (or interest-holder) be by sale as prescribed according to the guidelines, through a third party, or by outright exchange, with all documents in support of the transaction ready to repel the outside party who might attempt to come in under the guise of the Express Trust's grim reaper.

<sup>159</sup> We have already covered the nature of the certificates in that previous section, so we won't reexamine it here.

<sup>160</sup> See MURRY V. KING, 153 Mo.App. 710, 135 S.W. 107; and MILLS V. MILLS, 63 Fed. 511 (C.C.Or. 1894).

KEEPING MINUTES

As mentioned earlier, it is the duty of the trustee(s) to keep minutes for all resolutions, decisions, and acts done in the administration of the trust. This is a form of accounting, and may suffice as the accounting, however, it is recommended that some separate, more detailed accounting always be kept. It is generally best to keep minutes of every Board of Trustees meeting, based upon the notes or report taken during the meeting, or, if there is only one trustee for the trust, on a decision-to-decision basis. How often and by what protocol minutes are kept is, of course, a matter of the trustee's discretion.

The rule of thumb is that at least one Board of Trustees meeting regarding general business or the status of the trust should be held (and the minutes kept) annually. They should probably be held (and kept) at least quarterly, in conjunction with all other accounting. The more often the accounting, the more up-to-date, accurate, and reliable the records in administering trust business. Everything the trustee does should be clearly reflected in the minutes, which can be kept using any word-processing software (or even a typewriter). The minutes are stored in succession in the minutes book section of the trust binder. (I have provided samples of minutes for various acts and resolutions by the Board of Trustees. The format and core language is always the same or similar.)

PREVAILING IN LEGAL AFFAIRS

Here is where we shall get into legal action, the rare instance of public legal affairs, such as determining tax liability, defending a court action instituted against the trust (or trustee), and prosecuting a legal action on behalf of the trust (or trustee) as well as the possible necessity of commencing a private action pursuant to the Commercial Process. The reader must keep in mind that the chances of an action being taken against the trust or trustee who has properly limited his liability are slim to none. And if an action is taken against them anyway, generally, such cases don't make it past the crucial phase of determining jurisdiction. When one examines the definition of jurisdiction, the fog begins to clear:<sup>161</sup>

Jurisdiction, n. 1. A government's general power to exercise authority over all persons and things within its territory <New Jersey's jurisdiction>. 2. A court's power to decide a case or issue a decree <the Constitutional grant of federal- question jurisdiction>. 3. A geographic area within which political or judicial authority may be exercised <the accused fled to another jurisdiction>. 4. A political or judicial subdivision within such an area <other jurisdictions have decided the issue differently>. [Bold emphasis added.]

There are two territorial jurisdictions created by the Constitution: the first is "the Territory,"<sup>162</sup> i.e., that designated portion of the earth's surface which is deemed the imperially extensive real estate holdings of the nation over which all power must be exercised within the strict letter of the Constitution; the second is the "other Property,"<sup>163</sup> i.e., a territory unincorporated (not included) into the Union of

<sup>161</sup> Black's Law Dictionary, p. 855 (7th ed. 1999).

<sup>162</sup> Art. IV, § 3, cl. 2 in reference to the incorporated "Union" of states incorporated under clause 1 of the same section. The Articles of Confederation were also incorporated into the Constitution under clause 1, and the Union of states is also incorporated under the Articles of Confederation by reference.

<sup>163</sup> Id. This "other Property" is known as "a territory". Both "the Territory" and "other Property" signify property, since the language in that section is not "the Territory or Property"—the operative word is "other". Therefore, "other Property" must be interpreted to mean "a territory," as in a governmental subdivision which happened to be called "a territory," but which could have been called a "province," "colony," etc. It refers to an incomplete state. See EX PARTE MORGAN, 20 Fed. 298, 305 (D.C.Ark. 1883); and O'DONOGHUE V. UNITED STATES, 289 U.S. 516, 537 (1933).

states, over which all power may be exercised strictly according to the mere "spirit" of the Bill of Rights as interpreted by Congress.

The latter is subject to Congress outside the strict letter of guarantees of the Constitution and Bill of Rights. In the former, the federal government can have no direct control over the people but by way of contract because it is entering onto every scene equally subject to the same laws as all persons; as opposed to the latter wherein the federal government can have full and direct control over people who are beneficiaries of this jurisdiction. As noted earlier, they may act "as they see fit [i.e., as trustees], for the benefit of public policy regulations (known as codes & statutes) of this jurisdiction."<sup>164</sup>

Understanding that most courts currently in business in America are in fact, by the 1938 change in the operation of law, courts of limited jurisdiction,<sup>165</sup> limited to cases involving subject-matter of the 14th Amendment public trust, it becomes clear that whether they are distinguished as federal or state courts, such is a distinction without a fundamental difference— all are inherently federal. In order to get at how such courts may obtain jurisdiction over an Express Trust or its trustee(s) in a legal action, the nature of jurisdiction should be briefly, but sufficiently examined.

First, a court must have three essentials: jurisdiction to determine jurisdiction, jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the case (i.e., it must have the power/competence to decide the kind of controversy involved), and jurisdiction over the parties to the case (i.e., in personam or personal jurisdiction to compel the parties' performance). If either one is lacking in any way, the court is without power to decide the case;<sup>166</sup> and any order, decree or judgment, other than a dismissal, by such a court is void ab initio,<sup>167</sup> having only the semblance or appearance of validity,<sup>168</sup> and may be attacked directly or collaterally and vacated at any time.<sup>169</sup> It is settled law that "a tribunal has jurisdiction to determine its own jurisdiction,"<sup>170</sup> which brings us to the remaining two elements.

Subject-matter jurisdiction is like the hub around which the wheel turns: without the hub, the wheel cannot turn credibly. It consists of two parts: the statutory or common-law authority of the court to hear the case and the appearance and testimony of a competent fact-witness (i.e., sufficiency of pleadings). It can never be waived; and it cannot be obtained by lapse of time, consent of the parties, or any event other than the sufficiency of pleadings of the party bringing the suit (i.e., the plaintiff).

<sup>164</sup> Brobst et al., supra.

<sup>165</sup> Such courts are defined as having "[j]urisdiction that is confined to a particular type of case or that may be exercised only under statutory limits and prescriptions. Also termed special jurisdiction." Black's Law Dictionary, p. 856 (7th ed. 1999).

<sup>166</sup> See ABELLEIRA V. DISTRICT COURT OF APPEAL, 17 Cal.2d 280, 109 P.2d 942 (1941).

<sup>167</sup> See HOLSTEIN V. CITY OF CHICAGO, 803 F.Supp. 205; LUBBEN V. SELECTIVE SERVICE SYSTEM LOCAL BD. NO. 27, 453 F.2d 645 (C.A.1 (Mass.) 1972); HOBBS V. U.S. OFFICE OF PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT, 485 F.Supp. 456 (D.C.Fla. 1980); and IN RE ADOPTION OF E.L., 733 N.E.2d 846, (Ill.App. 1 Dist. 2000).

<sup>168</sup> See MILLS V. RICHARDSON, 81 S.E.2d 409 (N.C. 1954).

<sup>169</sup> See PEOPLE V. ROLLAND, 581 N.E.2d 907, (Ill.App. 4 Dist. 1991); PEOPLE V. WADE, 506 N.W.2d 954 (Ill. 1987); and IN RE MARRIAGE OF WELLIVER, 869 P.2d 653 (Kan. 1994).

<sup>170</sup> ABELLEIRA, supra at p. 302.

However, although it may have been established by the pleadings, it can still be lost due to, inter alia—

- Fraud upon the court;<sup>171</sup>
- The judge's failure to follow proper procedure;<sup>172</sup>
- The unlawful activity or undisclosed conflict of interest of the judge (e.g., involvement in a scheme of bribery);<sup>173</sup>
- The court exceeding its statutory authority;<sup>174</sup>
- Violation of due process;<sup>175</sup>
- Improper representation of a party before the court, improper issuance of a summons, or defective service of process;<sup>176</sup>
- Proper notice not being given to all parties by the movant;<sup>177</sup>
- The court basing its order or judgment upon a void order or judgment;<sup>178</sup> and

- Violation of public policy.<sup>179</sup>

And when subject-matter jurisdiction is lacking or lost, the court must discharge its ministerial duty to dismiss on that ground on its own motion, whether it has personal jurisdiction or not.<sup>180</sup>

Given the preceding sections on the unincorporated banking association under former H.J. Res. 192, and all of the above regarding the “other Property” nature of the states today, it is easy to see why these courts are ipso facto courts of limited jurisdiction, having no jurisdiction over subject-matter in “the Territory”. But assuming for the sake of explanation that subject-matter jurisdiction did exist, then personal (or personal in rem)<sup>181</sup> jurisdiction over the trust and its trustee(s) can only be obtained in four ways, either by the trust’s or trustee’s—

1. Presence<sup>182</sup> (i.e., its/his being served with a copy of the summons and complaint while physically present in the forum jurisdiction);

<sup>171</sup> See IN RE VILLAGE OF WILLOWBROOK, 37 Ill.App.3d 393 (1962); and ROOK V. ROOK, 353 S.E.2d 756, (Va. 1987).

<sup>172</sup> See ARMSTRONG V. OBUCINO, 300 Ill. 140, 143 (1921).

<sup>173</sup> See Code of Judicial Conduct; and the ALEMANN cases, BRACEY V. WARDEN, U.S. Supreme Court No. 96-6133 (June 9, 1997).

<sup>174</sup> See ROSENSTIEL V. ROSENSTIEL, 278 F.Supp. 794 (D.C.N.Y. 1967).

<sup>175</sup> See JOHNSON V. ZERBST, 304 U.S. 458, 58 S.Ct. 1019 (1938); PURE OIL CO. V. CITY OF NORTHLAKE, 10 Ill.2d 241, 245, 140 N.E.2d 289 (1956); and HALLBERG V. GOLDBLATT BROS., 363 Ill. 25 (1936).

<sup>176</sup> See JANOVE V. BACON, 6 Ill.2d 245, 249, 218 N.E.2d 706, 708 (1955).

<sup>177</sup> See WILSON V. MOORE, 13 Ill.App.3d 632, 301 N.E.2d 39 (1st Dist. 1973).

<sup>178</sup> See AUSTIN V. SMITH, 312 F.2d 337, 343 (C.A.D.C. 1962); and ENGLISH V. ENGLISH, 72 Ill.App.3d 736, 393 N.E.2d 18 (1st Dist. 1979).

<sup>179</sup> See MARTIN-TREGONA V. RODERICK, 29 Ill.App.3d 553, 331 N.E.2d 100 (1st Dist. 1975).

<sup>180</sup> See MORRIS V. GILMER, 129 U.S. 315, 326-327 (1889). Once a judge has knowledge that subject-matter jurisdiction is lacking, he has no discretion but to dismiss the action, and failure to do so subjects the judge to personal liability.

<sup>181</sup> That is to say, “against the thing” as though it were a person vested with legal rights, as is the case with proceedings against vessels under Maritime Law. In such maritime claims, the standards of INT’L SHOE regarding fairness and substantial justice that govern in personam actions are applicable. See SHAFFER V. HEITNER, 433 U.S. 186 (1977). It should be noted however, the much deeper level to in rem jurisdiction, for instance, that a presumption of in rem jurisdiction must necessarily precede all actions in personam, whether maritime or otherwise. In rem jurisdiction exists, in some form, officially recognized or not, in almost all courts of whatever law. It is, in fact, what ultimately empowers courts to exercise personal jurisdiction, in a practical sense, because, as the maxim goes: possession is nine-tenths of the law; hence, nowadays, courts will generally prefer the parties to be represented by counsel, as has traditionally been the practice in actions against vessels which can not otherwise be heard in court.

<sup>182</sup> The physical presence of a defendant in the forum is a sufficient basis for acquiring jurisdiction over him, no matter how brief his stay might be, as long as it is served while present. See PENNOYER V. NEFF, 95 U.S. 714 (1877).

2. Domicile<sup>183</sup> (i.e., residence alone is a basis for exercising jurisdiction. In the case of corporations, domicile is the state in which they are incorporated, and in the case of Express Trusts, the place of their situs);
3. Permission or Consent<sup>184</sup> (i.e., a trustee either personally or on behalf of the trust, having not been properly served, can nevertheless give the forum court permission to exercise jurisdiction. Depending on the act of the trustee, permission can be given well in advance of any lawsuit filed and the consent can also be implied); and
4. Minimum Contacts<sup>185</sup> (i.e., having sufficient dealings or affiliations with the forum jurisdiction which make it reasonable to require the trust/trustee to defend a lawsuit brought in the forum state. If the state has no contacts, ties or relations with the trust or trustee(s), personal jurisdiction cannot be obtained in this manner).<sup>186</sup> The four principles of minimum contacts are, that:
  - a. The trust’s or trustee’s activity must be continuous and systematic in the forum jurisdiction, and the cause of action must be related to that activity;
  - b. Sporadic or casual activity of the trust or trustee(s) in the forum jurisdiction does not justify the exercise of jurisdiction in a cause of action unrelated to that activity;

- c. If the trust's or trustee's contacts are sufficiently substantial and of such a nature as to make the exercise of jurisdiction reasonable, then general<sup>187</sup> jurisdiction may be exercised by the forum over the trust or trustee(s); and
- d. If the trust's or trustee's activity is sporadic or consists only of a single act, then specific<sup>188</sup> jurisdiction may be exercised by the forum only when the cause of action arises out of that activity or act.

183 See MILLIKEN V. MEYER, 311 U.S. 457 (1941).

184 See HESS V. PAWLOSKI, 274 U.S. 352 (1927). Under this doctrine, a forum state can legislate that a nonresident motorist using its highways be deemed to have appointed a local official as his agent to receive service of process in any action growing out of the use of the vehicle within the state. But the state must have provided actual notice of this to the nonresident motorist beforehand. The obvious questions are whether the trustee is a motorist or traveler, whether the conveyance is a vehicle or automobile, whether the trustee is driving or traveling, and what exactly are the actual physical or metaphysical territorial limits of the jurisdiction— these are fundamentals to jurisdiction, which may only be bypassed with the express or implied permission of the party to be charged.

185 See INTERNATIONAL SHOE CO. V. WASHINGTON, 326 U.S. 310 (1945). Under this doctrine, the trust or trustee who has never set foot in the forum may nevertheless be subject to valid personal jurisdiction so as to be compelled to defend a lawsuit there provided that it/he has minimum contacts with the forum such that would not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.

186 The minimum contacts must have been had in the form of purposeful affiliation on the part of the trust or trustee(s). See HANSON V. DENCKLA, 357 U.S. 235 (1958).

187 This is defined as “[a] court’s authority to hear all claims against a defendant, at the place of the defendant’s domicile or the place of service, without any showing that a connection exists between the claims and the forum state.” Black’s Law Dictionary, supra. In order for a court to assert general jurisdiction there must be substantial forum related activity on the part of the trust or trustee(s). See HELICOPTEROS NACIONALES DE COLOMBIA V. HALL, 466 U.S. 408 (1984).

188 This is defined as “[j]urisdiction that stems from the defendant’s having certain minimum contacts with the forum state so that the court may hear a case whose issues arise from those [specific] minimum contacts.” Black’s Law Dictionary, p. 857 (7th ed. 1999).

Analyzing Jurisdiction

Unlike subject-matter jurisdiction, once personal jurisdiction is obtained, it can rarely be lost. And if the trust (or trustee) permits or makes an unrestricted appearance, it cannot be later denied. Contrary to the general appearance which constitutes consent, the trust or trustee(s) may avoid personal jurisdiction by making a special or restricted appearance for the purpose of attacking the forum court's personal jurisdiction,<sup>189</sup> and may even attack, so to speak, subject-matter jurisdiction. Generally, a challenge to subject-matter jurisdiction constitutes consent, a waiver of personal jurisdiction for the purpose of arguing, but this doctrine does not apply to cases involving Express Trusts over which subject-matter jurisdiction clearly does not exist.<sup>190</sup>

<sup>189</sup> See DICKSON V. PARKER, 212 P. 42, 59 Cal.App. 778 (1922); and BROWN V. RINER, 496 P.2d 907.

<sup>190</sup> A challenge to the subject-matter jurisdiction of the court where it is clear on the face of the record that subject-matter jurisdiction is lacking is not inconsistent with a challenge to personal jurisdiction. Moreover, since the court must dismiss on its own motion, an appropriate challenge to subject-matter jurisdiction aids the court in performing its duty. The defendant should therefore be allowed to point out lack of subject-matter jurisdiction without making a general appearance. JUDSON V. SUPERIOR COURT, 21 Cal.2d 11, 129 P.2d 361 is to the contrary, but it has often been criticized (see 31 Cal. L. Rev. 342; 1 WITKIN, CAL. PROCEDURE (1954), § 76, p. 346) and is overruled. GOODWINE V. SUPERIOR COURT, 63 Cal.2d 481, 485 (L.A. No. 28464. In Bank. Nov. 4, 1965).

Upon further analysis of the preceding diagram, we see the following—

- Presence: the trust is created and functioning in “the Territory,” doing business under the general common law, not the private law of the unincorporated banking association. Presence can therefore only be construed to exist where the trust has become a member of that association via residence in a revenue district (indicated by ZIP code) or by engaging in a particular transaction. Even then, the trust or trustee(s) must be “present” by membership or transaction in that particular political subdivision (“State”) and given notice “reasonably certain”<sup>191</sup> to reach them (i.e., service of process via either personal service, substituted service, or constructive service) as service by mere publication in a newspaper of general circulation has been held insufficient in such cases.<sup>192</sup> (And, as a side-note, mere physical presence in a courtroom during some phase or proceeding does not constitute an appearance.)<sup>193</sup>
- Domicile: the situs of the trust is in the united states of America, designating “the Territory,” the Union of states as the land of which the common law is supreme law. Unless the trustee(s), in behalf of the trust, adopts a principal place in the “other Property,” establishes a residence in a place subject to the federal jurisdiction with the “intention to make it [its] domicile,”<sup>194</sup> personal jurisdiction is lacking in this respect. It must purposely establish an address directly in a revenue district (e.g., via post office box, or street address) to be liable in this way. But if the trustee(s) contracts with a private mail service provider or carrier, signing “without prejudice,” then personal jurisdiction does not attach— this effects an exclusion of any third- party intervenor/overseer, and reserves the obligation to the course of the common law of contracts (i.e., bilateral contracts not trilateral ones).
- Permission: it may seem tricky but it is rather simple. Any answer to any presentment from a forum jurisdiction constitutes giving them permission to exercise authority, unless it is specifically a special or restricted appearance for the sole purpose of challenging their authority (personal jurisdiction). If the trustee(s) do not answer in general, or subordinate themselves, then consent has not been given. And if the trustee(s) (presumably under properly limited liability) enter into a contract under a forum-selection clause, then the forum selected will have personal jurisdiction. However, there are limitations to what constitute an enforceable forum clause; for if the clause is expressed in fine print, placed in the contract so as to avoid litigation,<sup>195</sup> unreasonable or ambiguous,<sup>196</sup> not “fundamentally fair,”<sup>197</sup> or if the clause could not have been disputed without impunity as a part of a freely negotiated contract, then it is invalid.

<sup>191</sup> MULLANE V. CENTRAL HANOVER TR. CO., 339 U.S. 306 (1950).

<sup>192</sup> See PENNOYER, supra; and BURNHAM V. SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF MARIN, 495 U.S. 604 (1990).

<sup>193</sup> See AUSTIN V. STATE EX RE. HERMAN, 10 Ariz.App. 474, 459 P.2d 753.

<sup>194</sup> Black’s Law Dictionary, p. 1473 (4th ed. Rev. 1968).

<sup>195</sup> See JOHNSON AND JOHNSON V. HOLLAND AMERICA LINE-WESTOURS, INC., 557 N.W.2d 475.

<sup>196</sup> See DEIRO V. AMERICAN AIRLINES, INC., 816 F.2d 1360, 1364 (C.A.9 (Or.) 1987).

<sup>197</sup> CARNIVAL CRUISE LINES, INC. V. SHUTE, 499 U.S. 585, 595 (1991); HODES V. S.N.C. ACHILLE LAUROED ALTRI- GESTIONE, 858 F.2d 905, 908 (C.A.3 (N.J.) 1988); and SHANKLES V. COSTA ARMATORI, S.P.A., 722 F.2d 861, 866 (C.A.1 (Puerto Rico) 1983).

- Minimum contacts: the trust must purposely avail itself of benefits (and services) of the state<sup>198</sup> (e.g., license, registering “ownership” there, contracting with the government there, availing itself of benefits or services of the legal system there— court actions, utilizing police or fire services, etc.—systematically and continuously, or sporadically but substantially enough so as to warrant the trust or trustee(s) being compelled to come into the forum).<sup>199</sup> I will not get into diversity of citizenship here, though it is wholly important to subject-matter jurisdiction in the federal courts, for it is highly improbable that it would even be necessary to bring it up in such an action, given all of the above with which the Express Trust is naturally armed.<sup>200</sup>

As a final note, when the Express Trust is taking an action against an outside party, the most effective method is via the Commercial Process, i.e., a private (out of court) legal action instituted under the fundamental rules of commerce/trade (Business). Lawsuits should be regarded as a last resort to secure judicial enforcement of a private judgment, for public suits confer full personal jurisdiction upon the court. Taking a claim to a legislative court avails the trust of several benefits and services of that forum, and thereby establishes a substantial minimum contact. Even still, any action for judicial enforcement of a private judgment can be done out of court pursuant to the Commercial Process. In private actions, the maxims of commerce, the foundation of all commercial law and western legal systems, govern.

MAINTAINING PROPER I.R.S. RELATIONS

Last but not least, due attention must be paid to the Internal Revenue Service, for they are the lawful, legal entity, duly authorized to collect association dues (income taxes) from 14th Amendment citizens and other persons volunteering and availing themselves of the “privileges and immunities” regarding non-payment of debts in the system implemented under former H.J. Res. 192, 12 U.S. Code § 95(a), and 15 U.S. Code, ch. 41, § 1602(c)(d)(e). “They [participants] are considered as a debtor/creditor in a social security association (unchartered, unincorporated commune) whereby each person insures everybody else in the association by agreeing never to demand payment for debts. [It is] [u]nder this volunteer arrangement [that] these persons become primarily a U.S. citizen, secondarily a state citizen, ‘subject to’ clause 1 of the 14th Amendment, while the literal 10th Amendment rights are forfeited.”<sup>201</sup>

Persons under this system have only relative rights to life, liberty, and property; their natural rights are converted into “privileges and immunities” and “civil rights”. As debtors, they have no absolute literal property ownership, for it has thus been converted to mere usership.<sup>202</sup> Plainly put, taxes serve several functions, but principally as dues for the privileges and immunities associated with participating in the “federated unincorporated interstate banking association for the non ‘Payment of Debts.’”<sup>203</sup>

<sup>198</sup> See WORLD-WIDE VOLKSWAGEN CORP. V. WOODSON, 444 U.S. 286 (1980); ASAHI METAL INDUSTRY CO., LTD. V. SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA, SOLANO COUNTY, 480 U.S. 102 (1987); see also Dick Lancial, BENEFITS ACCEPTED = JURISDICTION.

<sup>199</sup> See HELICOPTEROS, supra; and PERKINS V. BENGUET CONSOL. MIN. CO., 342 U.S. 437 (1952).

<sup>200</sup> A good case to review regarding the rule of “complete diversity” is STRAWBRIDGE V. CURTISS, 7 U.S. 267 (1806).

<sup>201</sup> Brobst et al., supra.

<sup>202</sup> “Debts ... are not the property of the debtors; they are obligations of the debtors, and only possess value in the hands of creditors. With the creditor they are property [absolute].” JONES V. NEW PITTSBURGH COURIER PUB., 364 A.2d 1315, 469 Pa. 157, quoting IN RE STATE TAX ON FOREIGN-HELD BONDS, 82 U.S. 300, 320, 21 L.Ed. 179 (1872). See also Beale, supra at p. 114.

<sup>203</sup> Brobst et al., supra at p. 14.

What’s more, the collection of income taxes is crucial to maintaining order within the association, more so than for any proposed funding of the association.<sup>204</sup> But that has no bearing on a properly created and administered Express Trust. It is well-settled that a trust, created by parties not availing themselves of such privileges and immunities, is not illegal even if formed for the purposes of limiting or avoiding taxes altogether.<sup>205</sup> Nor is the Express Trust subject to federal excise taxes imposed on corporations.<sup>206</sup> Nor is an Express Trust taxable merely because it possesses all the accessory powers possessed by corporations.<sup>207</sup> Nor can the dignity of its trust instrument be set aside simply because a “tax benefit” results, whether by design or by accident.<sup>208</sup> Frankly, unless it incurs a tax liability in the United States via a valid forum clause in a contract, membership in the unincorporated banking association, becoming an employer, employee, or worker, or corporate entity, deriving income from corporate stocks or physical franchises, accepting other “privileges and immunities” under the 14th Amendment, or availing itself of any other benefits of the public trust invoking the doctrine of reciprocity, it has nothing to do with the IRS.

However, as it might stand as a beacon of organizational liberty, the IRS has a reasonable interest in making sure the Express Trust example does not upset collections and, most important of all, compliance; the IRS, thus, takes every precaution to shoot down trusts of any kind which even hint at having origins lying outside of its jurisdiction, i.e., the “other Property”. It is interesting to note that the IRS-taxpayer relationship, by operation of law, is that of beneficiary (cestui que trust) to trustee. It is a classic resulting trust. The taxpayer is presumed to be a trustee, hence he is legally obligated to report and make distributions to the party having a legal right to certain amounts pursuant to the trust bylaws, i.e. the US Tax Code. It becomes understandable, then, that the IRS would construe every instance, no matter how rare, of a non-statutory trust condemned in court as being attributable to some purported inherent unlawful nature of non-statutory trusts in general. Hence the classification of “abusive trust,” though any trust (statutory or non-, express or implied, resulting or constructive) which abuses the fundamental principles upon which equity rests is, technically, abusive. Yet, they never speak of them. The reader should therefore be keen to know how to discern good information from dis- and misinformation.

In the event the IRS takes an action against a purported “common-law trust” or “pure trust,” (a.k.a. “poor trust”) it is generally a lawful action, actually in response to some unlawful activity on the part of the parties or defect in their contractual relations. Your author has never seen an action taken against a properly drawn Express Trust, i.e., one drafted from the perfected language and form of that “best legal talent”<sup>209</sup> to which the power and superiority of the Express Trust is attributed. Even in those cases, a thorough analysis of jurisdiction, such as the one treated in the previous section, sheds light on the blatant limitations of the IRS’s, and courts’ in general, jurisdiction.

<sup>204</sup> “If ... government refrains from regulation [i.e., taxes] ... the worthlessness of the money [i.e., credit] becomes apparent, and the fraud upon the public can be concealed no longer.” John Maynard Keynes, THE ECONOMIC CONSEQUENCES OF THE PEACE, p. 225 (1920). It has been argued that in 1930s America, with the outcry for quick- fixes as opposed to independent recovery, the public requested (democratically) the frauds which occurred during the Depression Era.

<sup>205</sup> See WEEKS V. SIBLEY, supra; and PHILLIPS V. BLATCHFORD, supra.

<sup>206</sup> See ELIOT V. FREEMAN, supra; and MAINE BAPTIST MISSIONARY CONVENTION, supra.

<sup>207</sup> See PHILLIPS V. BLATCHFORD, supra; GLEASON V. MCKAY, 134 Mass. 419 (1883); O’KEEFFE V. SOMERVILLE, 190 Mass. 110 (1906); and OPINION OF THE JUSTICES, 196 Mass. 603, 627 (1908). See also THE PERSONALITY OF THE CORPORATION AND THE STATE, 21 L. Qly. Rev. 365, 370 (Oct. 1905).

<sup>208</sup> See EDWARDS V. COMMISSIONER, 415 F.2d 578, 582, (C.A.10 (Okla.) 1969).

<sup>209</sup> Sears, supra at § 1, p. 3.

The fact that they manage to establish subject-matter jurisdiction and personal in rem jurisdiction attests to the ignorance of the defendants, and indeed, personal jurisdiction usually would never have been obtained without the defendants’ unwitting permission.<sup>210</sup> It is no secret that all actions of the IRS are commenced as proceedings in admiralty.<sup>211</sup>

CONCLUSION

The only way to thrive in twenty-first century America is to “own nothing and control everything,” privately. And though any trustee is the legal owner of the property in trust, the trustee(s) of Express Trusts do not experience the incidents of personal ownership due to properly limited liability via trust instrument and the cardinal virtues of the trustee(s). It is this limited liability that makes the Express Trust no less than the corporation. But it is the latitude of choice of whether to function in the common law venue with absolute rights in commerce under the general law merchant or in the Roman civil law venue with only relative rights in commerce under private international law that makes the Express Trust, inter alia, far superior and profitable. Under the aegis of the Express Trust, the trustee is clothed in a veil impenetrable but from within.

This suit of armor is the trust instrument, which molds to the trustee in all his good-faith dealings on behalf of the trust, fully compensating him for his services, privileging his use of trust property, and enabling his exercise of creativity in business endeavors, all without the excessive weight of inquisitorial legislation.

The greater latitude afforded under Express Trusts manifests itself in a number of ways; one of which is in the prosecution of claims and commercial liens wherein the trust acquires for value the account of a debtor, and the trustee utilizes the trust’s qualities in order to effectively collect the debt owed. The trust brings with it a form of professionalism and authority which enables the debt to be collected honorably. And when one is trustee, he is in a fiduciary position generally looked upon with respect for the integrity inherent in the position. This has always been the case, except where the power has been abused. But even so, history is clear that there are far more abuses of power via corporations than Express Trusts.<sup>212</sup>

Given the statistics, and the fact that all governments in twenty-first century America are corporations themselves, it becomes clear that the extensive recognition given to corporations by the state is simply because of the special-interest relationship between the two. In a way, it is the same relationship between the “john” and the prostitute,<sup>213</sup> for it is always in the best interest of the prostitute to take measures to keep the “john” in business.

<sup>210</sup> In fact, Judge Robert Bjork, from whose name the phrase “bjork’d in the senate” was derived, is reported to have openly acknowledged, during Senate confirmation hearings, that every prisoner in America today is there because he gave his permission to be imprisoned, in one way or another. Supposedly, this is the reason why the Senators “bjork’d” him so badly.

<sup>211</sup> It is highly recommended that the reader read ARE YOU LOST AT SEA (1995), available in the Trustee Library.

<sup>212</sup> See Chandler, supra at p. 10, et seq.

<sup>213</sup> Governor Fernald of Maine, in his address to the Maine Legislature in 1909, referring to needed reformation of the corporation laws said, “[w]hile it is true that the State is receiving large revenue from this [corporate] source, it is also true that, in a considerable measure, it is the price of prostitution. I hope you will take steps to remodel them [corporation laws], along evident lines of reform, thus restoring to Maine her self-respect.” [Italics emphasis added]

This is done in order to indirectly protect her own job security. This is also the underlying cause for much of the negative sentiment towards Express Trusts operating in the statutory world. It is this relationship that has bred the irrational view that “some trusts have been created independent of statute; some non- statutory trusts are said to have done harm; therefore public policy demands that hereafter all trusts shall be regulated.” The irrationality of this becomes more apparent when the syllogism is paraphrased thus: “some lawyers have been Presidents of the United States; some Presidents are said to have done harm; therefore public policy demands that hereafter all lawyers shall be prohibited.”

The bottom line is that the Express Trust relation is the most effective means to owning nothing while controlling it all, and, when utilized properly, it affords its participants with all the ingredients of legal health and commercial wellness. It is also true that no matter how many arguments are made against the Express Trust, the learned reader will always see through the propaganda and spin, knowing the state's nagging concern is the utter lack of in rem jurisdiction over Express Trusts; possession is nine-tenths of the law. At the end of the day, in rem jurisdiction remains in the private venue, i.e., with the trustee pursuant to the private contract between he and the settlor. So, from natural deduction, it should become clear that the Express Trust can really only fail due to some misgiving or impropriety on the part of the trustee— the trustee must therefore trust himself.

BIGGEST ISSUES IN TRUST ADMINISTRATION

Due to the flexible nature of an Express Trust, there can be numerous intricacies to one's own particular trust, trust web structure & management thereof which can affect a number of things including jurisdiction and liabilities. While this is in no way an exhaustive list, here are the most common issues that people run into when running a trust.

- Public Contracts
- Minimum Contacts (receiving statutory benefits/privileges/franchises)

- Presence (by General Appearance)
- Domicile
- Permission/Consent
- Having Sufficient Dealings within Jurisdiction
- Must Pass the 'Control Test'
  - Grantor(s) and Trustee(s) cannot be related by blood or marriage (even common law or divorced). A Trustee may be related by blood or marriage to another Trustee.
  - If grantor retains any control whatsoever, it is NOT a private express trust
    - NOTE: 95% of the trusts seen in court and beaten – is because they did not pass the control test
- Fraudulent Conveyances
  - May not transfer property that has encumbrances (or in attempt to subvert collection), but you may transfer the equity that is free and clear while leaving the title
  - Must show good faith, (often by 3rd party verification), that the transaction was an equal exchange (no $1 for a home transfers)
- Commingling Assets
- Rule Against Perpetuities
  - Must LOCK-IN a Beneficiary within 21 Years
- Trustee Incompetence
- Defending in Court
- Tax Liability

Trust Affairs Outline

- Power and Duties of a Trustee
- Compensation
- Private Contracts
- Accounting and Minutes
- Banking
- Transfer of Assets
  - Exchange (barter)
  - Grant (gift or donation)
  - Purchase (negotiable instruments)
    - Beware of Committing Fraudulent Transfer

- Sale (use of currency - avoid this when possible)
  - Beware of Committing Fraudulent Transfer
- Buy (use of precious metals)
- Assignment (private garnishment)

FURTHER QUESTIONS ON TRUST ADMINISTRATION

The Support Center offers a large array of answers to prior questions that many have upon starting Trustee Training, questions like:

- How does the house go in trust and how would it pass to my heirs?
- If one puts the house, car or other assets in the trust, how can it be sold?
- What about life/health insurance with the trust?
- What about inheritance, how do I avoid probate?
- How does one use the trust with a job or income to avoid taxes legally?
- Can one run a business through the trust without any issues (like business licenses)?

Visit the Support Center and browse through the content and view all the questions we have answered already... most will find their question has already been asked with a quick search!

COPYRIGHT CLAIM

© Private Wealth Academy Trust. All rights reserved. No part of this document may be reproduced or utilized in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, including but not limited to photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, without the express permission in writing from the owner of the copyright. This copyright is covered under the criminal statutes, FNSP Act 72-78 and 80-84, where conviction can result in criminal penalties of up to $250,000 for individuals and $500,000 for corporations and imprisonment for up to 5 years for the first offense and 10 years for subsequent offenses. Never copy or use this document without written permission. Refunds available as previously described (or) within seven days of purchase, refund issued minus physical product price and shipping.